By ARTHUR BRISBANE

INTERVIEWED by the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, William Randolph Hearst says there will be war in Europe for many years, principally because Europeans nations haven't enough money to run a big war and would not again borrow it from the United States.

If war should soon come again in Europe conditions according to Mr. Hearst, would become very uncomfortable for those classes of human beings that have been most comfortable hitherto. After such a war Europe would be "depopulated and devastated," and this would be the situation, as Mr. Hearst sees it:

"After the travail, the tragedy, the anguish, the agonies of the next war resentful peoples in every nation will arise in complete rebellion—Communism and worse than Communism will be in complete possession of every state.

"The classes now important in the community—the classes which control government and will be held responsible for the war—will cease to exist.

"The poverty of the nations and of peoples, which is only partial now, will be complete.

"The destruction of class, destruction which is only partial now, will be absolute.

"Red mobs will surely rule in every nation and the present upper classes will find themselves the lowest and most detested classes, lucky if they even retain their lives.

"The scenes of the recent Russian revolution and of the earlier French revolution will be repeated in every state in Europe.

"The destructions of the social revolution, which will follow the war, will be as great as the devastation of the war.

"Combined, they will mean annihilation, anarchy."

IN SPITE of a gigantic vote, about 38,000,000 to about 4,000,000, that gave Hitler absolute power in Germany, Hitler's ardent admirers are annoyed that even four million votes should read "no." The Jews of Germany could not well be blamed, since there are only 600,000 of them. They could not well cast 4,000,000 votes. Herr Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda chief, suggests in his newspaper Angriff that the anti-Hitler votes were cast by German Catholics.

That "no" votes were Catholic votes seems probable, in view of the attitude of Hitler's government toward religion in general, Catholicism in particular, and emphatic complaints made by the Vatican.

IT IS FEARED by Protestants as well as Catholics in Germany that hostility to Christianity may develop and spread among Germans, as it has done in Russia, Spain, Mexico and elsewhere.

General von Hindenburg, revered by the Germans, urged German churches "to see to it that Christ is preached." But von Hindenburg is dead, and August Hoppe, writing for the Hitler youth movement of Germany, praises "the movement toward Paganism in the Protestant church, urging young Germans to take up the fight against Christianity and realize that their conversion to Christianity was a crime against the German race and people, which put them completely at the mercy of powers outside the state."

Young Mr. Hoppe tells Germans "liberate yourselves from the cultures of alien priests who want to make you the booty of the Jews. Discard the last vestiges of Christian training, so destructive to us Nordics. Abandon the Jewish-Christian conception of sin, pity and loving the enemy."

AMONG OTHER steps toward paganism, is included the suggestion that Germany "restore the hemlock cup." You remember that Socrates, condemned to death, was ordered to "drink the hemlock," which he did, philosophizing nicely while the poison spread to his heart, as Plato tells you, and refusing to escape from his prison when opportunity was offered him, that he might set a good example.

Some in Germany want to revive the ancient custom of giving prisoners their choice of being killed or killing themselves. Your college boy who has read Tacitus will tell you how it worked in old days, how the ungrateful Nero, for instance, educated by Seneca, sent word to his old teacher that the time had come for him to die, whereupon Seneca obligingly opened his veins and bled to death.

HOWEVER, the Germans as a whole are a sensible people.

MAYOR GEORGE H. LYSLE

LYSLE TOSSES 2 REDS OUT

Mayor George H. Lysle, 68-year-old chief executive of McKeesport, personally tossed two young Communists from his office today.

Louis Wargo and a companion had appeared at Mayor Lysle's office to seek permission to hold a meeting at Fourth and Market streets, but were told they would have to hold the meeting at Ninth and Water streets.

Wargo said:

"That place is too isolated; we can't get any crowd."

Mayor Lysle replied:

"You can hold it there or else."

Wargo said:

"We have rights under the Constitution."

Mayor Lysle declared:

"The Constitution is not made for birds like you two."

He then chucked Wargo and his companion from the office.

Wargo's parting shot was:

"You will hear about this."

Slayer Leads Break From Indiana Jail

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Under the leadership of one-legged "Wee Willie" Mason, 34, alleged member of the 'Egan Rats" gang of St. Louis, four prisoners sawed their way out of the 75-year-old Hamilton County Jail here today.

The break, led by Mason, facing a second trial for the murder of an Indianapolis police officer, was discovered when Sheriff Frank Hattery failed to hear the customary snoring of the prisoners in their cells.

Slaying of Leader Nips Cuban Revolt

HAVANA, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—An attempted revolutionary movement by a section of the Cuban army was nipped in the bud today by the slaying of Lieut. Col. Mario Hernandez, commander of troops in the city of Pinar del Rio.

The abortive revolt was quashed by Col. Fulgencio Batista, strongman commander-in-chief, who learned of the revolt and sent officers to Pinar del Rio to arrest Hernandez.

Lindys in St. Louis Awaiting New Plane

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are paying their second visit of the year to St. Louis.

The famous flying couple arrived from the East by plane and will remain several days while finishing touches are being put on a new ship built for them at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Preacher Confesses Hoax in 'Kidnaping'

GOLDSBORO, N. C., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Rev. R. H. Askew, Four-Square Gospel evangelist, confessed today, Sheriff Paul Garrison said, that his story of being kidnaped was untrue and that he wrote the ransom messages received by his wife.

MOB TRIES LYNCHING AT SALE

Blackjacks Quell 500 In Foreclosure Riot; 'Reds' Blamed

International News Service.

MEDINA, O., Aug. 22.—Ohio's most violent "penny auction," marked by an attempted lynching and fierce but brief rioting during which several persons were injured, was written into farm history of the state today.

While a heavy rope with its end looped into a noose swung ominously from a tree, Sheriff Roy Kruggel and 14 deputies fought the crowd of more than 500 yesterday which had gathered at the farm of Cort Stuart, three miles southeast of Spencer, to turn a foreclosure sale into a "penny auction."

The hand-to-hand battle lasted more than 15 minutes with the peace officers swinging their blackjacks freely. The mob hurled stones.

Sheriff Kruggel, who declared that Medina County farmers were "law-abiding citizens," blamed a crowd of between 150 and 200 Cleveland Communists, whom he branded as "trouble makers," for the rioting.

Several articles were bid in for less than eight cents and returned to Stuart. A short time later, however, a farmer bid $1 for one article and the Communists raised a loud cry of "lynch him."

One of the mob's ring-leaders jumped on the auction block and began to incite the crowd. Another led a group of men toward the farmer who had defied their edict.

DIVORCE LAID TO COLLUSION

Following closely warnings by Judge A. B. Reid, president judge of Common Pleas Court, against collusive divorces, Mrs. Lillian D. Avetta, of Brownsville road, Carrick, today sought to void a divorce her former husband allegedly obtained by collusion.

In her petition filed by Attorney Joseph I. Winslow, she contends she entered into an agreement not to contest a divorce action brought by Albert J. Avetta, son of a wealthy wholesale fish merchant. In return, she said, Avetta agreed to pay her $20 weekly.

The former wife also charged she and Avetta continued close relations following the divorce in 1931. They lived at 40 Cedar boulevard, Mt. Lebanon, she said.

Judge Reid in his warning urged special masters to scrutinize cases closely for evidence of collusion in uncontested cases.

Missing Sea Flier Found in Iceland

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—John Grierson, British aviator forced down in a fjord while attempting to cross the North Atlantic in a light plane, was found today.

He was uninjured and he planned to take off again later in the day for Angmagsalik, Greenland.

Boys of '98 War on Reds

Vigorously denouncing communism, the thirty-sixth National Encampment of the United Spanish American War Veterans today in convention adopted these resolutions:

1—Deportition of all aliens who advocate change in form of government and adoption of a system of registration for all aliens now in country.

2—eDmand that all public educational institutions be closed to teaching of Communism and other doctrines subservive to Constitution.

3—No cturailment of educational advantages in name of economy, and the urging of the brand of traitor for those who refuse to come to defense of country in time of need.

4—Deplore fact that men in public position of trust and responsibility make questionable their loyalty and allegiance to government.

Action of the encampment seated in convention session came at noon and followed addresses during the morning session of former United States Senator Rice W. Means, a past commander-in-chief and chairman of the veterans' legislative committee; Supreme

6 HURT IN RACES AT VET OUTING

Six persons were injured and one war veteran suffered a heart attack during a series of horse races featuring a field day picnic for the United Spanish War Veterans at the County Fair Grounds yesterday.

Four of the injured were girls hurt in a bad spill in a race for 10 girl jockeys.

Those injured included:

Mrs. Pearl Snyder, 29, of Grove road, Castle Shannon, probable fractures of the skull and right arm.

Miss Shirley Schade, of 714 East Shady drive, Mt. Lebanon, daughter of Harold Schade, proprietor of the Buffalo Inn restaurant at the fair grounds entrance. Body and leg injuries.

Rita Jean Rimmel, 13, of Carnegie. Bruises and back sprain.

Ethel Chettle, 26, of 3629 Brownsville road, Brentwood. Leg sprain and bruises.

Elmer E. Moody, 65-year-old Spanish War veteran, of 118 West Third street, North Platte, Neb., was seized with a heart attack when he witnessed the accident.

Injured in previous pony races when their horses crashed them against barriers were Anna Belle Shields, 17, of 3755 Frazier street, Oakland, and Hoyt Wines, of Pasadena drive, Aspinwall.

Born With Broken Bones, Infant Dies

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Little Carolyn Mercer, born 75 days ago with a large number of fractured bones, is dead.

Physicians said the baby had been developing normally and that death was not caused by the fractures. For some time she was strapped to a board to relieve strain on the broken bones. She died yesterday in the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children.

FLAMING OIL EXPLOSION PERILS 9

New Kensington Fire Destroy's Pennsy's Old Terminal

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Aug. 22.—Nine New Kensington firemen narrowly escaped death or serious injury early today when six barrels of oil exploded as they fought a blaze that destroyed the old Thirteenth street terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Flames shot 100 feet into the air as the oil, stored outside the building, let go.

Firemen pouring several streams of water into the structure narrowly escaped being sprayed by the flaming fluid.

The damage, according to Fire Chief Edward Clawson, was $3,000.

The origin has not been determined.

The fire was discovered by strike pickets at the Fourteenth street entrance of the New Kensington plant of the Aluminum Corporation of America.

Police reported that the pickets watched the fire smolder for nearly half an hour before turning in an alarm. They were reported to have told police they thought the fire a red light until it burst into flames.

The burned building, since the removal of the terminal offices, had been used as a car inspector's office and a tool house.

Hundreds of residents attracted by the spectacular fire, watched firemen battle the flames.

ALUMINUM CO. REJECTS PEACE

Government attempts to settle the aluminum strike failed today as the Aluminum Company of America rejected the peace plan proposed by Federal Mediator Fred Keightly, which would have resulted in immediate calling off of the strike.

Keightly had suggested all workers be returned to their jobs without discrimination, and negotiations be continued for 10 days by both sides. At the end of that time if no agreement could be reached, he suggested the National Labor Relations Board act as final arbitrator.

The plan was acceptable to the Aluminum Workers' Council, the council told Keightly.

It was the suggestion that the Labor Board be given eventual authority to handle the matter that proved the chief snag in the company's objection.

Roy A. Hunt, Aluminum Company of America president, in his reply to Keightly's plan, said:

"Demands for closed shop, checkoff, universal wage rate, and union agreement as submitted by the American Federation of Labor are not proper matters for arbitration."

Keightly said he will probably return immediately to Washington to report to Secretary of Labor Perkins. He has no alternative suggestion to offer, he said.

Sax Appeal Wanes, Harmonica Rules

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Sax appeal, the public at large may be glad to know, is on the wane. At the annual convention of some 300 musical instrument manufacturers and jobbers here today delegates agreed that the harmonica and the accordion were the latest rages in musical circles.

Kerensky at Sickbed Of 'Mother of Revolt'

Elopement Ends In Holding Girl And Ex-Convict

What started out as a happy elopement from a farm in New Jersey ended in Morals Court here today with a 25-year-old ex-convict held for court on charges of stealing an automobile and his 16-year-old sweetheart held for her parents.

The errant travelers are E. C. Smith, chauffeur of Trees Mills, N. J., and Helen Mick, of Clayton, N. J., who were arrested in Defiance, O., as they headed for Texas in an automobile stolen in Pittsburgh.

Prisoner Smith

The police said Smith admitted bringing the young girl to Pittsburgh by bus after taking $400 from his father. He said they spent their money here, after which he took an automobile from the garage of W. E. Carnahan, 6001 Fifth avenue.

Smith said he was on parole from Western Penitentiary on an auto theft charge.

$50 Death Threat Laid to Husband

Testifying in her suit for divorce today, Mrs. Ruth M. Dix, of Ross township, said of her husband:

"He told me he could have me killed for $50 and no one would ever know."

She said her husband, Lynn P. Dix, drank to excess. The case is being heard by Judge Joseph A. Richardson.

HOLDUP LAID TO NEW KING OF CRIME

Swift Police Launches Scour N. Y. Bay for Bandit Crew

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—All squad and detective cars in the five boroughs of the city were ordered to communicate with their precincts and district offices in a command broadcast from police headquarters shortly after noon today.

It was learned unofficially at police headquarters that secret orders to all squad car men and detectives were to be transmitted by telephone.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A new arch criminal, craftier than a Capone and deadlier than a Dillinger, hid today from the law, with the largest loot of cash ever taken in an American holdup jingling in his jeans.

Timing his $427,000 robbery of an armored truck yesterday as a sardonic coincidence to Police Commissioner O'Ryan's sixtieth birthday anniversary, this new strategist of crime executed the theft so smoothly and fled so swiftly that his trail ran everywhere today into dead ends.

Feverishly following a maze of will-o'-the-wisp leads, police today found no tangible clues to the whereabouts of the bandits.

'POPEYE' WANTED

The hunt for the desperadoes was almost entirely marine. Swift police launches, carrying heavily-armed crews of detectives, roared through the bay on secret missions.

A flurry of excitement caused by the finding near Floyd Bennett Airport of a cabin cruiser bearing the name "Popeye" quickly subsided. Witnesses said that one of the boats into which two of the bandits leaped at Bay Thirty-fifth street shortly after the holdup yesterday was named "Popeye."

Charles Zaun, of Brooklyn, owner of the "Popeye," told police that his boat, a 30-foot cabin cruiser, painted white with brown trimmings, was at Harm's yacht basin during the holdup.

Police also investigated another "Popeye" at the foot of Kimball street, Brooklyn. It was a 12-foot rowboat.

Shortly before noon, a police launch swung up to the foot of Bay Twenty-fifth street, was boarded by a crew of detectives and speeded out into New York Bay for an unannounced destination.

Loomis Wolfe, employe at the lumberyard near the spot where one of the bandit cars was abandoned, told police that about 10 o'clock yesterday morning the automobile left there had appeared, and that its occupants got out and walked to the pier. They apparently looked over the ground carefully, he said, adding that at that time there were no boats docked at the pier.

CITY-WIDE HUNT

Throughout the night the air bristled with radio commands to cruising squad cars and speedy police patrols:

"Stop all cars occupied by two or more men."

"Search all garages and inquire if Lincoln sedan already

GERMAN ENVOY SHUNS BEAUTY

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Because the beautiful Fraulein Kant, grandniece of Emanuel Kant, brightest star in the constellation of German philosophers, is partly Jewish, Ambassador von Hoesch, Germany's representative at the court of St. James, today declined an invitation to attend the judging of 18 beauties at Hastings for the title, "Miss Europe."

Ambassador von Hoesch wrote:

"'Miss Germany' is not of pure Aryan blood and Reichsleader Hitler's regime is strongly antagonistic to the whole proceedings."

Soviet Ambassador Maisky also declined to attend because "Miss Russia" is a white Russian living in exile and therefore "no true member of the U. S. S. R."

Robbery Near Scene Of $427,000 Holdup

BROOKLYN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Anthony De Sicco, night manager of a branch of the Rubel Ice Company, reported to police that a pair of armed men invaded the branch office early today and stole $525 in cash.

The branch is about a mile from the scene of yesterday's $427,000 holdup, which was executed at another office of the Rubel company.

'Lady Godiva' Asks to Ride For Volunteer Firemen

BALTIMORE, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The volunteer firemen of Long Green Valley, Baltimore suburb, recently announced a horse show, to be featured by a jumping contest with lady riders in costume. Now they reveal that one lady had announced she would compete costumed as Lady Godiva.

The rules committee claimed to be worried—not as to the propriety of the proposed costume, but as to the technical question:

"Can a lady without any costume compete in a costume event?"

Skeptics from neighboring fire houses, who saw their advertised carnival features of fish and cockroach racing overshadowed by the Green Valley equestrian, claimed the whole thing was a bare fraud.

But the Long Valley snake eaters only retorted:

"Come and see."

The show is scheduled for Saturday.

Broadway Cabaret Offers Job to Eloping Colette

The bright lights of Broadway called to 15-year-old Colette Mulvihill today, but they called in vain—if Colette's father has anything to do about it.

The father, Thomas J. Mulvihill, Gulf Oil executive, said he would oppose Colette's accepting an offer of an engagement in a Broadway cabaret.

The cabaret, according to a telegram from New York, was attempting to get in touch with the girl who sprang into the limelight by jilting a married Spaniard and eloping to Wellsburg, W. Va., and there marrying Truck Driver Thomas Creen.

Meanwhile, after a short vacation in the mountains, Colette has returned to the Brunner farm, near Grove City.

From far-off Manila came word that Sidriano Paredes, rich and socially prominent Spaniard to whom Colette said she once was engaged, married Nena Barbast, Spaniard beauty, in 1931 and although separated from her has not obtained a divorce.

Paredes was quoted as saying:

"It looks as though Colette and I are in the same boat."

'MASTER MIND' DEADLIER THAN DILLINGER HUNTED IN 'PERFECT CRIME'

"Be on lookout for 12 men in three cars, one carrying Thompson machine gun. Apprehend with caution."

No arrests have been made, but scores of men, women and children—witnesses to all or part of the holdup—have been questioned. Hours were spent last night by witnesses in going through the rogues' gallery at Manhattan police headquarters. The police declined to discuss the result of this phase of their inquiry. The witnesses were pledged not to make any statement.

One officer said three men who police suspect may have had big fingers in the robbery are being sought. This was without further confirmation.

BOOTLEGGER SUSPECTED

Some credence was given to a theory that the crime was conceived in the brain of some former bootlegger made desperately poor by repeal. This theory was given substance by the finding last night of money bags—possibly the very bags in which the $427,000 was being transported—in the rear of Finnerty's bar and grill at 2115 Emmons avenue, Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn.

The Sheepshead Bay territory is close to that once controlled by the notorious Frankie Yale. It was here, too, that Vannie Higgins—like Yale an eventual victim of gang guns—operated a flourishing rumrunning traffic, using speed boats that laughed at spasmodic pursuit.

The empty money bags were found crammed beneath cigaret vending machines in Finnerty's place. They were stamped "Federal Reserve" and "Brooklyn Manhattan Transit."

Phil Claro, a bartender at Finnerty's, said two men whom he never had seen before entered the barroom at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon—three hours and a half after the robbery—and had a round of beer. The number of men involved in the holdup has been variously fixed at between 10 and 14.

BANK'S OWN CASH

The money taken from the armored truck consisted of sums collected at several Brooklyn branches of the Bank of Manhattan, as well as from private firms. It was destined for the Federal Reserve Bank in Manhattan.

The robbery is without precedent either in the size of the cash loot or in the nature of the theft itself. Never before has an armored truck of the United States Trucking Corporation been robbed. The trucks themselves have always been spoken of as "holdup proof."

An average of $19,000,000 is transported in these trucks through the streets of New York each week day. Tuesdays are the "big days," more money being handled then than on others.

The police have apparently no inclination toward any theory that the holdup may have been an "inside job." They call attention to the fact that not only were the two guards and the truck driver men of vouched-for integrity, but also that no advance information as to a truck's route is ever made known.

The truck crews do not know from one day to another what stops they are to make or what route they are to take. Sealed orders are given into the hands of the truck "conductor" just before starting each day.

NO POLICE RECORDS

A detective, returning early today to headquarters after hours on the case, said he was convinced that (1) the robbers were former hijackers of the dry era, and that (2) they probably are men without city or New York state police records.

The hijacker technique marked yesterday's truck robbery, this officer said. In prohibition days, he recalled, gangs numbering a dozen or more men would swarm over the side of a rum-running vessel, take over the cargo at the point of pistols and machine guns, and escape in speed boats to prearranged destinations where fast motorcars and trucks awaited.

Fast cars and speedboats were essentials of yesterday's crime. The theives drove away in cars of such power as to enable them to outdistance pursuit, and went directly to a dock where speed boats waited to race them out of the police circle that had been quickly swung around downtown Brooklyn.

PLANNED FOR MONTHS

This detective, who declined to be quoted by name, said there is little doubt but that the robbery had been planned for more than two months. Motorcars used in the crime, he pointed out, were stolen early in June, as were the license plates which were used on them yesterday. The machines, he said, were probably kept hidden until the search for them had blown over.

The employment of an ice cart as a vehicle for conveying machine guns to the scene of an intended robbery was a touch strengthening belief that a new crime strategist had leaped forward to snatch the mantle of master rogue that fell when federal guns dropped John Dillinger in Chicago. When the moment for action came, a burlap covering was yanked from the cart, showing a machine gun ready for action.

The distribution of gang members about the vicinity of the Rubel Ice Corporation's plant at Bay Nineteenth street and Cropsey avenue, was further evidence of careful plotting. Some of the gang lounged about tennis courts across Bay Nineteenth street, a touch recalling the ball game that mobsmen played in Chicago as they waited to execute the Dearborn Street Station mail truck robbery in which $500,000 in negotiable securities was stolen.

The precision of execution yesterday has never been excelled in fact and seldom even in fiction. The three truck guards, each armed, were covered by robbers so quickly that even the quickest movement for their weapons would have been suicide. The truck driver, Joseph Allen, had his hand resting on the butt of his pistol, yet could not draw. A sharp blow across his knuckles made him powerless, even had he defied the guns that were leveled at him and at the guards, John Wilson and William Lillienthal.

More than 50 persons were in plain view while the robbery was going on, yet many of them were unaware of it. As quickly as they had covered the truck guards, the robbers began to transfer bag after bag of currency and coin from the truck to their own machines. Machine guns swung menacingly at the group of men gathered on the ice corporation's loading platform.

$29,000 ABANDONED

There were 22 sacks of money remaining in the truck when a sudden command of "scram!" sounded from the lips of the leader. The robbers ran for their cars, leaving behind $29,000 and dropping one of their machine guns in the only false move of an otherwise expertly done crime.

Snatching up this weapon, Lillienthal, the truck guard, jumped into the "holdup proof" truck, as did Allen and Wilson, and opened fire as they gave pursuit to the thieves. None of the bullets took effect, and the robbers soon disappeared.

An evidence of the precision of the criminals was noted in the manner in which the holdup was timed. Lillienthal had stepped from the truck. Wilson followed. Allen, the driver, was just on the point of stepping down when the robbers' guns flashed. Had Allen stepped clear, the automatic door of steel would have snapped shut, locked. One of the thieves pushed the ice cart forward to hold the door open.

RECALLS OTHER CRIMES

Some officers expressed the belief today that yesterday's robbery was planned and executed by the same mind that conceived the Penns Grove (N. J.) National Bank and Trust Company robbery February 2, of this year, when $130,000 was taken, and the Prudential Savings Bank holdup in Brooklyn last May when the loot was $23,084.

Bandit's Hands Trembled, Guard on Auto Says

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Trembling bandits with shaking hands is the way William Lillienthal described the machine gun gang that looted the armored truck on which he was a guard of $427,000 yesterday, when he got home and told his wife, Mrs. Anna Lillienthal, about it.

It doesn't bother Mrs. Lillienthal, she says, this being an ormored car guard's wife. It's an old story to her. Lillienthal has been working for the armored car company for 11 years and the first year he was there, she said, a holdup man slugged him over the left eye with the butt end of a gun.

Mrs. Lillienthal paused this morning in the midst of household duties associated with the care of seven children in their modest flat, to relate how her husband told her what happened.

"My husband said, 'I was getting off the truck and this man came up to me and said 'Stick 'em up.'' I thought it was a joke and said 'Aw, don't bother me, I've got no time for fooling.'

" 'He said 'Stick 'em up' again. I looked at him and I saw the gun in his hands for the first time, and I saw that he was trembling. I began to think maybe it was a stickup and I said, 'stop shaking. That gun might go off.'

" 'Then the man took my gun and with the two guns in his hands—they were both shaking—he said, 'Come on, get inside and lie down.' He was still shaking. He took me into the ice plant office and told me to lie down on the floor and I did.'

" 'When the gunmen drove off I ran out to the street and saw the machine-gun lying on the sidewalk. I picked up the gun and told the chauffer to follow the bandits in the armored truck. We followed one car, but we lost it on Cropsey avenue.' "

Mrs. Lillienthal, picking up the youngest of seven concluded:

"And that is all I remember of what Bill told me.

"I don't worry. I'm used to it. Only I'm glad there wasn't any shooting yesterday."

Dillinger Mobsters Hunted in Holdup

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Remnants of the bullet-riddled John Dillinger gang and known Chicago gunmen today were being hunted by police here in connection with yesterday's $427,000 money truck holdup in Brooklyn.

Detectives were busy trying to determine the whereabouts of such persons as Murray Humphreys, Frank (Little New York) Campagna, "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn and John (Three Finger Jack) Hamilton.

Some of these, police have definitely established, recently were in New York. Whether they remained for the holdup was what police sought to find out. Officers said the brazen holdup bore all the ear-marks of Dillinger mobsters, whose leader was slain by federal men here several weeks ago.

Friendship, Not Love for Powell, Says Harlow

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Stories about a new romance in the life of Jean Harlow, famous platinum blonde screen actress, were denied today by the actress, speaking publicly for the first time since her name was linked with William Powell, film actor.

JEAN HARLOW

There is nothing more than a friendship that had its beginning when Powell went to work at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, where she also is under contract, Miss Harlow said.

The actress said rumors of their impending marriage started when Powell joined her and her mother, Mrs. Marino Bello, for two days during her recent vacation at Del Monte, Cal. She said:

"It is such rumors as this that ruin Hollywood friendships. I'm almost afraid now to go out with a man because of the rumors that follow."

She said she saw Powell occasionally and would continue to do so. But as to marriage, she pointed out she was still married to Hal Rosson, cameraman, who now is in England.

'CAPONE' TRAIN AT ALCATRAZ

International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22.—With military precision Uncle Sam today successfully transferred across the continent to Alcatraz—the new Devil's Island—the most sinister aggregation of criminals in its history. Among them was believed to be "Scarface" Al Capone, former public enemy No. 1.

Not one of the 43 prisoners left the traveling fortress until the train itself was hauled by barge to the rocky apron of the tiny Gibraltar-like islet in San Francisco Bay.

With infinite care and unparalleled caution the government moved the assortment of its most notorious underworld characters from the East to the West coast—from Atlanta to Alcatraz penitentiaries—exercising war-time strategy in the daring enterprise.

Tin Plate Company Recognizes Union

CANONSBURG, Pa., Aug. 22.—Recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Union was announced here today by the Standard Tin Plate Company, a subsidiary of the Continental Can Company.

In a statement issued by George J. Williams, president of the local union, and D. G. Geeseman, general manager of the company, it was announced the company had agreed to a wage scale for the employes of the hot mills and to recognize the union in all other departments for collective bargaining.

Merriam to Study Mooney Pardon Plea

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—If Acting Gov. Frank Merriam is elected to succeed himself he will give "serious consideration" to an application for pardon filed by Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing, the executive said today.

Escort 'Broke,' Ida Remains As 'Security'

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The latest high finance yarn around here concerns an embarrassing predicament of Ida Lupino, movie actress, and Henry Willson, youthful agent for film players.

IDA LUPINO

As the story goes, the couple drove down to see the opening of "Treasure Island." After buying tickets, Willson unexpectedly found he had only 25 cents cash left. When they left the show, Ida wanted some candy and Willson nochalantly squandered 15 cents more.

After one block en route home they ran out of gasoline. Ida had 9 cents. With Willson's remaining 10, this was enough for a gallon.

But the filling station man several blocks away insisted on 50 cents deposit on the can.

A brilliant inspiration hit all three almost simultaneously.

N. Y. Editor Dies At Summer Home

WHITEFIELD, N. H., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Osmund Phillips, assistant managing editor of the New York Times, died at his summer home in Whitefield today.

GIRL DEFENDING SISTER BEATEN WITH HAMMER

Woman Driving With Escort Attacks Pair, Abandons Auto

Coming to the aid of her sister, Mrs. Virginia Wiatts, 19, of 1214 Resaca place, was struck on the head with a hammer by another girl in Shermman avenue, North Side, last night.

Taken to Allegheny General Hospital, she was found suffering from a possible skull fracture.

Mrs. Watts and her sister, Mrs. Alberta Maloney, 21, of 1213 Resaca place, were returning home from a Federal street theater when an auto drew even alongside them. Inside, they told police, were a woman—known to Mrs. Maloney—and a male accompanion.

The woman alighted from the auto, according to the story told police, and made for Mrs. Maloney with a hammer. The latter's sister attempted to step between the pair and received a blow on the head.

The attacking pair fled after abandoning their car, according to police.

Mrs. Maloney had formerly lived with her assailant, she said, and had taken her into court, charged with stealing her wrist watch.

Early today, Mrs. Maloney and her husband, Frank, 29, were arrested and held for investigation after hearing in North Side Police Court. Their arrest had nothing to do with last night's attack, police said.

TRAIL BREWER'S KIDNAPERS

International News Service.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 22.—An atmosphere of expectancy pervaded police headquarters today as reports were circulated that arrests would be made within 36 hours in the John S. Labatt kidnaping mystery—Canada's first major abduction.

Half a dozen men were reported to be under suspicion. How many of these men—if any—would be arrested was not divulged by the police, who continued to maintain tight-lipped secrecy about their plans.

The police were said to have obtained at least 40 photographs of men with criminal records. One report was that these photographs were shown to Labatt. Whether the brewer, who was released after having been held captive for 63 hours, was able to identify any of them was not disclosed.

Labatt has said that four men participated in the kidnaping.

250 ASK REPAIR LOANS HERE

Two hundred and fifty applications for loans to make housing repairs have been made to Pittsburgh banks since the inauguration of President Roosevelt's housing renovating program here on August 15, according to Edward B. Lee, Pittsburgh district administrator for the Federal Housing Administration.

Lee addressed a meeting of the Pittsburgh Housing Co-ordinating Committee in Mayor McNair's conference room today.

Norman Thomas Sues Deputy, Coal Firm

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Norman Thomas, the Socialist leader, today filed suit in Federal Court for $15,000 damages against Joseph Betterton, deputy sheriff in Christian County and the Peabody Coal Company, charging he was falsely arrested May 21 while speaking at Taylorville.

French Actress Escapes Death In River

YVONNE PRINTEMPS

Float Overturns During Filming Of 'Camille'

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Yvonne Printemps, noted French actress, had escaped possible death from drowning today. A float overturned in the Seine River during the filming of a scene for a motion picture version of "Camille."

A cameraman was drowned.

Miss Printemps was sitting in a small boat when the float from which she was being photographed capsized, plunging the operator, Abel Gant, into the river, together with the apparatus.

Strong eddies caused by the accident rocked the actress' boat violently but failed to upset it.

CO-ED FEARED SLAIN IN WOODS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Hundreds of Birmingham citizens joined police today in a search for a missing Howard College co-ed, Miss Faye New, 19, who officers said they believed had been killed.

The girl, a pretty brunette and active in athletics at Howard, was last heard from Monday night. Police said that Harold Taylor, 20, told them he went riding with Miss New and that she had jumped from the car and run into the woods near the abandoned Ruffner mine after a disagreement.

Transfer of Cash By Autos Probed

BALTIMORE, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Maryland and Baltimore police today were investigating a report that a large sum of money was transferred from a New Jersey to a Maryland automobile last night at Havre De Grace. They sought to determine if it had any connection with the $427,000 armored truck robbery in Brooklyn yesterday. There were five men in the two cars.

RICH GIRL SKIPS TO BE QUEEN OF HAMBURG

Co-ed Heiress Found Gayly Frying Food 'Wimpy' Craves

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Search for Miss Janet Bowen White, 21, missing co-ed heiress who was feared to have taken her life in a fit of despondency, had ended today with discovery of the young woman at work in a restaurant in Bronson, Mich.

She telephoned her uncle, J. F. Nash, in Detroit.

"I am all right and am having the time of my life working hard. Come on out. This is a good restaurant and you'll like the way I fry hamburgers."

Nash said he would go talk things over with her.

Miss White, daughter of the late Kirby White, wealthy Detroit manufacturer, had been missing since Friday. Both Nash and Lyman White, her brother, had expressed the fear she had taken her life over slow progress in studies at the University of Michigan. Lyman White left yesterday to follow a clue to Chicago.

The girl told a reporter:

"I don't want to say why I ran away. All I know is I'm happy here. All my troubles seem to disappear in the soapsuds when I scrub the dishes."

She said she had left her home in Ann Arbor last Friday and walked to the edge of town with the idea of just going away.

"I was lucky and got several rides as far Bronson before nightfall came. I came to this restaurant and Mrs. Ruth Phillips said I could have the job of a girl who was just quitting.

"I said I was 'Judith Anderson.'

"Mrs. Phillips has been very nice to me and seemed pleased at the way I caught on to the work. I got so I could fry eggs and some of the nicest hamburgers you ever could eat. I got a terrible kick out of it and I want to stay here for a while.

"I've also scrubbed the floor and washed dishes."

Mrs. Phillips agreed her new waitress was proving herself competent, saying:

"She washed the dishes, scrubbed the floors, and helped with the cooking. If she hadn't worked hard, she wouldn't have stayed here."

Bonelli to Sing 'Tosca' in Film

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—As a test of the possibilities of grand opera in the movies, Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan Opera baritone, has been engaged to sing one of his roles in a new picture.

In "Enter Madame," Bonelli will sing the second act of "La Tosca," with Elissa Landi.

Weather Conditions

Showers and thunderstorms occurred during yesterday and last night at many places east of the Rocky Mountains, and it is cloudy this morning over most of the area. This condition is due to the large area covered by the low pressure, centered over the plains yesterday, and which is now located over Eastern Ontario and extends southwestward over the Ohio Valley states to Texas. High pressure is centered over South Dakota and Nebraska, and over the South Atlantic coast. Temperature changes were towards rising over the Ohio Valley states and towards falling over the Northwest. There were no maximum temperatures of 100 degrees or higher yesterday except in Texas and New Mexico. The highest reported is 102 degrees at Abilene.

River Conditions

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 1-10th foot below zero; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 10.6; Pittsburgh, 10.5; Dresden, 4.9; No. 6, 9.3; No. 10, 9.4, and No. 12, 9.5. The dams are up.

Memento: Machine Gun Used in $427,000 Holdup

(READ STORY ON PAGE ONE.)

DISCARDED MACHINE GUN AND ITS DISGUISE: A PUSHCART

The machine gun left behind by the bold robber band that stuck up an armored bank car in Brooklyn, escaped with $427,000. Two by-standers as the truck stopped threw the tarpaulin from this pushcart, produced a machine gun as other gunmen closed in.

LaGuardia Backs Lotteries, 4 Yearly, for Jobless Relief

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Four lotteries a year—a corporation picking officers by lot for fabulous three-month salaries—are planned by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and city lawmakers to provide unemployment relief.

Allowing 40 per cent of the receipts for salaries, or prizes, backers of the plan estimate that it will net $12,000,000 a year to meet the relief emergency.

Thirty-five million dollars more is expected from a business gross receipts tax of one-half of one per cent, 10 times the tax now in effect.

James J. Lyons, Bronx Borough president, drafted the lottery plan to skirt the state law against lotteries. Shares in the relief corporation would be sold for $2 or $2.50 each and officers would be chosen from among the shareholders at public drawings.

Democratic and fusion (LaGuardia) leaders have given it their support.

The proposed gross receipts tax would apply to revenue from professions as well as trade and other forms of business, but not to salaries. Businesses would be allowed $5,000 exemption, so that the firm grossing $50,000 in a year would pay $275 tax.

PICKFORD-FAIRBANKS FUTURE RESTING IN LAP OF GODS

Girl, 14, Faces Removal of Her Heart

Universal Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 22.—To save the life of 14-year-old Mary Erwin, it may be necessary to remove her heart and perform a particularly delicate and rare operation upon it, her physicians said today.

The fibrous envelope in which the heart functions has in Mary's case contracted and is squeezing the heart, interfering with its movements, and threatening the girl's eventual death.

If the operation is decided upon as a last recourse, ribs on the left side will be cut to permit the surgeon to reach the heart. The heart then will be lifted out and the covering removed.

Mary's Wistful Smile Hints Reunion, But Douglas Scowls

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The future of the royal family of the films, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, rested "in the lap of the gods" today.

That is the way "America's

DOUG AND MARY

Sweetheart" described the status of their once "idyllic marriage which has found its way into the divorce courts.

With a wistful smile she spoke of her meeting yesterday with Fairbanks upon his return to Hollywood after 14 months in Europe. What transpired between the two, for whom Hollywood hopes a reconciliation lies ahead, nothing was known. After the meeting, Mary said:

"Yes, I saw Douglas. Whether I shall see him again is in the lap of the gods. Further than that I can say nothing."

Fairbanks, true to the silence with which he has met all inquiries about his "private life," had nothing to say.

Questioned about the possibility of "making" up with his famous wife, he replied with a show of a scowl:

"There is no use asking me about that."

After an interval in which few knew what happened and none would tell, he met Miss Pickford in Beverly Hills, entered her automobile and went with here for a drive. It was after that that she made her statment.

Despite the secrecy of their movements, it was reliably reported Fairbanks dined with Miss Pickford at Pickfair.

There was almost certain to be another meeting between the couple.

ASHLEY INSISTS ON LAW SUIT

By GEORGE LAIT

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Reports that Lord and Lady Ashley might stage a dramatic reconciliation, now that Douglas Fairbanks, whom the peer named as co-respondent in his recent divorce action, has returned to the United States, were dashed today.

Attorneys for his lordship announced:

"There is not the slightest truth in reports the case will be dropped or shelved.

"So far as our information goes, it is the intention of the defendants to put in an appearance, but naturally with one of the chief parties in the United States it is quite possible there will not be a defense when the case is called."

OTTO'S MOTHER AWAITS CHANCELLOR--BUT IN VAIN

Boy, 4, Killed; Shot in Play By Uncle, 15

Four-year-old Ray T. (Sonny) Brown, of Alpine boulevard, Wilkins Township, was dead today, a victim of an accidental shooting, according to police.

He died last night in Pittsburgh Hospital, where he was taken after being shot when a revolver his uncle, Russell McClelland, 15 of 6937 Bennett street, was showing him dropped to the floor in the McClelland home yesterday afternoon, police said. The bullet entered his left side and came out the right side of his back.

The boy's grandmother, who took him to the hospital, said he and his mother, Mrs. Annabelle Brown, had been visiting at her home and the two boys were playing in the living room when the shot was heard.

Police said Russell was displaying the revolver to Ray when it fell. The gun struck a chair and discharged.

Dr. J. W. McMeans performed an autopsy at the hospital.

Austria May Permit Pretender's Return, Schuschnigg Says

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL

International News Service.

VIAREGGIO, Italy, Aug. 22.—The former Empress Zita was the most disappointed woman in Europe today. The man who could place her handsome son, the Archduke Otto, on the throne of the Hapsburgs in Vienna, passed her door during the night. But he did not stop.

The lights burned all night in the Bourbon Palace on the hill overlooking this charming town on Italy's Ligurian coast. But the Chancellor of her country did not enter, drop on bended knee, address her as "Your Majesty," and offer her for her son the imperial crown of Austria. Instead he sped by without stopping in an automobile.

It turned out that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's insistance at motoring north through Viareggio after the meeting with Premier Benito Mussolini had been to gratify a boyhood ambition to ride on a great ocean liner.

NICE, France, Aug. 22.—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, youthful pretender to the Austrian throne, may shortly be permitted to return to his native land to live, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria, indicated on his arrival here today.

The Austrian Chancellor revealed that the problem of Archduke Otto and his mother, the former ex-Empress Zita, had been discussed in some detail with Premier Mussolini.

Monarchial circles have always maintained that the first step toward a Hapsburg restoration should be restitution of the confiscated properties of Zita.

Trial Date Set For Youth in New 'Tragedy'

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Robert Edwards, 23, mining surveyor, charged with slaying Freda McKechnie so he might wed another girl, will be tried for murder September 10.

He was indicted by the grand jury late yesterday after a surprise move by District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis. Without explanation, Lewis called the case a day ahead of schedule, then kept witnesses waiting all day before presenting his evidence.

What line the defense will take remains a secret between Edwards and his counsel, Leonard Morgan.

The commonwealth contends that the young surveyor slugged his erstwhile sweetheart, about to become a mother, with a blackjack as she swam in Harvey's Lake on July 31.

The motive for the killing, as presented by the prosecution, was the surveyor's love for another girl, Margaret Crain, Kisat Aurora (N. Y.) music teacher. They were fellow students at the Mansfield State Teachers' College.

OFFICER SLAIN FOILING THEFT

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A Lock Haven policeman, Robert Probst, was shot to death early today by a robber he surprised in the act of breaking into a business place.

Three shots felled him, mortally wounded, in an alley in the center of the business section and within a half block of the police station. His pistol was found beside him. It had not been fired.

Drawn by the sound of the shots, another policeman, Martin Peters, came to Probst's aid. The fleeing thief shot thrice at him, and he returned the fire, and is believed to have wounded the slayer.

GRILL WITNESS, FOE OF MRS. COO

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Pale-faced Harry Nabinger, star boarder at Eva Coo's place, was put through a grueling cross-examination today by James Byard, Jr., counsel for Mrs. Coo, in her trial for the murder of Harry Wright.

In a spirited exchange, Nabinger, one of the state's chief witnesses, denied that he went up Crumhorn Mountain with Eva Coo last Memorial Day to pick out a spot where Wright could be slain. Byard demanded:

"Don't you know you're as guilty of this murder as anyone?"

"No, sir. I'm trying to tell the truth so far as I know."

Byard said:

"Don't you know that Eva Coo, as she sits there, is innocent of this murder?"

"Now I object to that. That's up to the jury," interrupted District Attorney Donald H. Grant.

Byard said:

"Well, if you object, I won't press the question."

3 GIRLS NABBED AS RUNAWAYS

Gone from their homes for 11 days, three Mid-Western girls who police said admitted they were runaways, were arrested at Bates street and Boulevard of the Allies last night when they stopped motorists for a "lift."

They gave their names as Mary Vitale, 20, of St. Louis; Bonnie Harman, 20, and Margaret Roche, 19, both of Belleville, Ill. The three were held for a Morals Court hearing.

DOG LOSES LIFE SAVING BABY'S

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Baby Donald Haney, 11 months old, owes his life to Yippy, pet Boston terrier, that lost his own in the rescue.

Donald was toddling about on the lawn when his mother saw him pick up something and start to put it in his mouth. As she called and walked toward him, Yippy leaped at the child, snatched the "something" and swallowed it. A few minutes later the dog was writhing in convulsions and died.

Police said several residents of the neighborhood reported recently their dogs have been poisoned.

PROBES DEATH OF JARNEGIN

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22—(AP.)—Coroner Frank A. Nance has ordered an inquest today into the death of Jerry Jarnegin, music composer and husband of Irene Franklin, actress.

Coroner Nance said he expected no new facts to be developed which might contradict a police verdict of suicide, but he thought it was "best to have the circumstances officially recorded."

Miss Franklin will be called as a witness to identify the body of her husband, whom she found Sunday night shot dead in the living room of their home.

Other witnesses will be the guests at a dinner party Miss Franklin had arranged. Miss Franklin heard the shot as she was serving dinner and ran to find her husband dead. A pistol was discovered by police in a chair six feet from the body.

'RUTH' ON NOTE WASN'T BABE

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Mrs. Elizabeth Beeve, blonde and pretty, found in her husband's pocket a notation to "see Ruth."

That, Husband John casually explained, was merely a reminder to see Babe Ruth play baseball. A little later the telephone rang and Mrs. Beeve answered.

"This is Ruth."

This spoke a sweet, feminine voice—and asked for Beeve.

Mrs. Beeve asked for a divorce.

GIRL CRIPPLED TAKING DARE

JOHNSTOWN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Twelve-year-old Velma Price's determination that no boy should outdo her in youthful daring has made her a cripple for life.

Velma, motherless daughter of William Price, due to Mrs. Price's death several years ago, was playing with several boys last night. They dared her to follow them in "hopping" a slow-moving freight train.

Undaunted, Velma led the way to the train and seized a rung on a box car. Her hand slipped and she fell. The train crushed her right foot so badly that amputation was necessary after she was taken to a hospital.

Amy Mollison Takes Channel Pilot Job

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Amy Johnson Mollison will be the first woman pilot on the regular cross-channel airplane services. She accepted a post as a commercial pilot with Imperial Airways today, explaining she wants the maximum practice before she enters the London-to-Australia air race with her husband next October.

ORDERS FOR 24 WARSHIPS LET

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—President Roosevelt's plan to build up the American Navy to full treaty strength moved swiftly forward today with award of contracts and allocations by the Navy Department for the construction of 24 new naval vessels in private and government shipbuilding yards.

Contracts for the construction of 11 of the new naval vessels were awarded to private yards. The other 13 warships will be constructed in navy yards.

Navy Scout Fleet Home Ports in West

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Acting Navy Secretary Roosevelt announced today that home ports for all vessels of the scouting force had been changed from the east to the west coast.

The change was made so that officers and men might obtain transportation for their families to the west coast while the scouting force is maneuvering out of coast ports during the next year.

Roosevelt said the change did not mean that the scouting force or the entire fleet might not return to the Atlantic.

COUGHLIN FIRES BLAST AT BANK SYSTEM OF U. S.

Universal Service

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, famed radio cleric and orator, enunciated a program of vigorous Americanism in a half-hour broadcast climaxing Americanism Day at A Century of Progress.

The exercises marked the formal entry last night of the American Legion in an offensive against communism and radicalism.

Father Coughlin impressed on his listeners the thought that radicals are made by existing economic conditions and issued a warning that radicalism very often takes unreasonable turns, as in Russia.

Criticizing the fight on the New Deal by some sections of the press, he also voiced opposition to some of the Roosevelt policies.

The present Federal Reserve System of banking came in for a bitter denunciation. In this connection, Father Coughlin said:

"Only nationalization of the system can bring money back to where the Constitution placed it. Two years ago I was laughed at when I predicted the monetization of silver. My prediction has since been realized.

"I want to predict to you now that within the next year you will see a complete nationalization of the Federal Reserve banks when they and the powers they have taken will come under the control of the Congress of the United States, where they belong.

"Capitalism is a system of economics by means of which present generations can borrow tremendous sums from future generations for the purpose of production. Not for destruction. Is the huge debt saddled on the world as the result of the war a debt for production? Unquestionably no! It is a debt for destruction.

"I want to warn you that if the Legion attempts to crush out radicals and communists without first crushing the evils of capitalism which have given birth to those radicals, the American Legion will find itself smashed upon the rocks of its own shortsightedness."

Father Coughlin then said:

"It is a sad commentary on modern life when Franklin Roosevelt is condemned openly for imitating Jesus Christ in feeding the poor."

Criticizing some phases of the New Deal, he added:

"There are some policies of the New Deal with which I cannot agree. I can't agree with the killing of pigs and cattle and the plowing under of acres of cotton while numbers of our brothers in the Orient are starving to death."

2 Hurt in Cafe Row, Waiter Also Held

Two men were cut on the head during an argument in an East Liberty restaurant last night. A third man, a waiter, was arrested with the pair on disorderly conduct charges.

Police said John Wagner, 400 Collins avenue, and Michael Cupples, 435 Kathleen street, were cut after a disturbance in Lou's Oyster House, 108 North Highland avenue.

They were alleged to have tossed beer bottles at W. A. Riffle, 6223 Station street, the waiter.

Driver of Auto Held For Nurse's Death

INDIANA, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—J. A. Duff, 28, of Export, is being held for court on charges of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Mary Frick, 21, young graduate of the Indiana Hospital, who was killed when a car driven by Duff struck a pole near the hospital.

Charges of driving while intoxicated, which had been filed against Duff were dismissed by Justice of the Peace Jay D. Hill at his arraignment last night on grounds of insufficient evidence.

How Do New U. S. Policies Affect a Man Without Cent In World, R. W. Child Asks

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author and Diplomat and Former U. S. Ambassador to Italy.

AT THIS moment the national government has a tremendous interest to us all.

It is possible to interpret that interest as it affects one man.

He may be one of many.

He is the man WITHOUT A CENT IN THE WORLD.

He wants to know whether we are to go on with our American civilization or try a new one.

He wants to know from the leaders of our destiny a clear answer to this question—WHICH?

Which course are we going to pursue?

Are we going to bulwark our old system, which produced an amazing human energy unparalleled in history?

Are we going to preserve a Constitution that has been the whole backbone of our record of unchanged democracy and personal freedom for individual development—a record that has continued longer than any other organized society has ever lasted?

Mr. Child

ARE WE going to stick to a policy that, depression or no depression, has produced the fattest dish ever passed around for mankind?

Or are we going to imitate the other desperate foreign experiments which, in a word or two, amount to this—the natural impulses of human energy, the natural hunger for freedom for safe development, the natural course of dealing between man and man, are all turned over to a government?

It makes little difference that the process is that of revolutions, such as those we have seen in Europe, or a sly, quiet nibbling at our foundations until the old structure falls and there is nothing left but blueprints imported from Germany or Russia.

The only difference is that those who whisper advice to the administration are not known, not out in the open. Not quite frank. Not quite exposed.

But, as numerous Senators and Congressmen—and Democrats who know that this is not a partisan question at all—realize, there is wisdom in weighing what a change from our tough-fibred civilization is going to mean—not to the rich, but to those of us who haven't a cent in the world.

The theory of change is a theory based upon the idea that distribution has been unfair, that profit-making has been an evil, that the poor can, by change, get something from the rich.

THE THEORY has been that what is on the platter should be divided more equitably.

And with that theory there is no trouble except one—THE MAIN POINT IS THAT THERE MUST BE SOMETHING ON THE PLATTER.

No civilization has equaled our own in putting meat on the platter.

A part of the reason is that we had isolation and resources, a part is that we had great variety of brains, a part is that we had a sense of fair play, so that—

AMERICAN BUSINESS AND AMERICAN INDUSTRY HAVE DONE MORE FOR MANKIND THAN ALL THE POLITICAL THEORISTS EVER.

We taught the world that a carpenter could go to work in a sedan.

We taught the world that EVERYBODY could go to school.

This is not boasting. It is a fact.

And now there are those who whisper in Washington—who conspire to whisper there—that we are all WRONG!

THEY ASK us to imitate Germany.

Germany is a couple of jumps ahead of starvation.

They ask us to imitate Russia.

Russia, with all her limitless resources, is broke.

They ask us to centralize in government the power of man and God, of individual enterprise, of business and of freedom.

THIS BELIES THE TERM—DEMOCRAT.

They ask us to imitate those experiments which in Europe, in the name of EQUITY, have reduced the man without a cent in the world to THE MAN WITHOUT A CRUST OF BREAD.

And UNCLE SAM is no such jackass!

MENJOU JOKES AT OLD VIEWS ON MARRIAGE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A thought of yesterday—that men of the theatrical profession should not marry—was touched upon lightly by Adolph Menjou, portrayer of sophisticated screen roles, as he filed notice of intent to wed for the third time.

With an apparent sense of incongruity Menjou smiling filed an application at the marriage license bureau for a permit to wed Verree Teasdale, also of the movies.

It will be Menjou's third marriage and Miss Teasdale's second. He gave Pittsburgh, Pa., as his birthplace and she said she was born in Spokane, Wash.

When Menjou was divorced from Kathryn Carver a year ago he voiced the conviction men in his profession should not marry. At that time, however, he said today, he was merely reciting a Dandy stock adage—a shibboleth that even George Bernard Shaw probably had forgotten. He said:

"That was just one of those things one says. I probably said it all right. But then, of course, I had not met Miss Teasdale."

Unaware of the couple's identity, a newsboy interrupted the application filling-out to sell them a paper, for which Miss Teasdale paid him a quarter. In a minute he was back for an autograph. Menjou said:

"You can have one on anything but a check."

He wrote his name on one of the boy's papers, as the corridor filled with people.

Advised the license would be available Saturday, Menjou asked the clerk:

"What time do you open?"

"Eight o'clock."

"Well, I don't think I'll be here that early. I guess I should have asked what time do you close."

Menjou said his lawyer is making arrangements for the wedding and that he was not certain just when or where it will take place. He added:

"But anyway, it won't be Yuma."

BRIDE'S KIDNAP STORY PROBED

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The motive behind kidnaping of a 21-year-old bride of two months and her release soon afterward by the two men who seized her has police mystified.

A name, "Miss Van Camp," was the only clue supplied by the young woman, Mrs. Ernest Schaeffer, of Boyertown, after regaining her freedom last night.

The two men tried to force her to admit, she declared, that she was the mysterious "Van Camp" woman.

Mrs. Schaeffer told police she was canvassing in Allentown yesterday for advertisements for a church publication. Two men in an automobile called to her, asking directions to the postoffice. She said one of the men thrust a pistol against her side and ordered her into the auto.

The men took her to a house in South Allentown and there tried to make her admit she was "Miss Van Camp."

Finally the trio returned to the car and drove toward Bethlehem. She was pushed out of the car after a struggle in which one of the captors hit her on the jaw. As evidence of her story, Mrs. Schaeffer exhibited a bruised knee, scratches and a torn dress.

WRECK PERILS PENNSY TRAIN

LATROBE, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Several scores of Pennsylvania Railroad passengers are alive and well today because their train from Altoona to Pittsburgh was five minutes late.

If the train had been on time last night, railroad officials disclosed, it would have reached Hillside at almost the same time 14 cars of a fast eastbound freight train left the tracks and plowed up the right of way.

Soon after the mishap, members of the wrecked train's crew hurried up the tracks and posted flares to halt the oncoming westbound passenger train. It was delayed for a short time while three wrecking crews from Pitcairn and Derry opened the tracks.

No one was injured in the freight train's crash. Railroad officials opened an investigation to determine the cause of the accident.

Carman Prevents Injuries in Crash

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—More than 50 passengers were shaken and two fainted when an eastbound subway-surface trolley car crashed into the rear of a disabled trolley in the Market street subway today.

Charles Moyer, operator of the stalled trolley, shouted a warning to his passengers, who rushed forward just before the crash, thus escaping injury.

$56,271 Contracts Awarded By City

Construction contracts totaling $56,271 have been awarded by the Department of Public Works. The two largest contracts were for $23,406 on the repair of the Pittsburgh filtration plant, granted to D. Dinardo, and the grading of the Sophia Evert playground, granted to Domenick Pavia on a bid of $16,033.

If Cat's Hungry It's Too Bad For Dog

SEATTLE, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Tom Kelly, 50 (charged with drunkenness):

"Judge, I've got to get back to my little farm near Tacoma or else it will be just too bad for my dog."

Judge William R. Bell:

"What's the matter with your dog?"

Kelly:

"Well, there's a cat on the farm, too, and that cat will be so hungry he's likely to eat the dog."

Kelly was released.

TURNER URGES AIR MAIL USE

Residents of Western Pennsylvania were urged today by Postmaster William M. Turner to use air mail so that Pittsburgh may become firmly established as a stop point on the air mail routes.

Postmaster Turner points out that the Postoffice Department now has in operation practically all of the new air mail system and has established what it believes the most logical routes.

He said:

"It now devolves upon our residents to show that Pittsburgh is a logical stop. The permanency of routes and stop points thereon will to a great extent depend upon the patronage."

The new low rate of 6 cents for each ounce in action makes air mail more attractive than ever to individuals and business firms, according to Turner.

KERR WON'T PAY M'NAIR'S NEW LAW AIDE

If Mayor McNair is in doubt about his standing as acting City Solicitor, City Controller James P. Kerr is not.

Dr. Kerr, when asked if he would pay Anne X. Alpern, appointed assistant city solicitor by the Mayor yesterday, he said:

"The Mayor has no authority to appoint assistant city solicitors. It has to be done by an authorized City Solicitor, and the Mayor is not that. I will not honor a warrant for her salary."

President of Council Robert Garland feels the same way about it, he said.

This was the result of the Mayor's action yesterday in seeking to recover $75,000 in magistrate's fees belonging to the city and held in the County Controller's office since 1917.

Release of the fees requires the signature of the City Solicitor, the Mayor was told by County Controller Robert G. Woodside. The Mayor's answer to that was:

"I am the City Solicitor, because I am the Mayor."

Woodside said he would arrange for the release of the fees if City Controller Kerr said it was all right.

Kerr told newspaper reporters:

"I told the Mayor if he could get the money it was all right with me, but I didn't say that I considered him to be the City Solicitor."

Before concluding the settlement, however, Mayor McNair telephoned President Garland and asked him if he should "go ahead and get the money?"

Garland said:

"If Controller Kerr says to, it's all right with me."

Later to reporters, Garland explained:

"I did not consider this an indorsement of the Mayor's stand that he is City Solicitor."

But the Mayor did. He immediately appointed Miss Alpern, youthful woman attorney, of 3441 Beechwood boulevard, as assistant city solicitor and poses with her for news photographers. She is to receive $2,500 a year.

The Mayor summed it all up with:

"You see, I am City Solicitor. Now what will Council do about it?"

Mayor, Mustache, Counsel

MISS ANNE X. ALPERN WARD BONSALL MAYOR M'NAIR

Mayor McNair, growing that mustache again, with his special assistant city solicitor, Mr. Bonsall, and Miss Alpern, Mayor-appointed new assistant solicitor. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

WORK FOR COURT SEEN BY M'NAIR

Welfare workers in Morals Court will continue to have "their hands full," despite Mayor McNair's decision to eliminate cases of drunkenness and minor offenses from Morals Court, he said today.

To the social workers' charge that decentralization of "family" cases would make it impossible for them to continue their specialized service to obtain extra-court adjustment, the Mayor said:

"I don't intend to remove cases of this type from Morals Court. All I'm doing is to leave it up to the arresting officer to decide whether the case needs the attention of Morals Court.

"There are many instances of drunkenness in which the husband is arrested on complaint of the wife and in which the wife is sorry she called the police 10 minutes after it happens. These cases don't need a Morals Court. They can be handled in the district police courts just as well."

S. E. Drumm Heads Pennsylvania Elks

GETTYSBURG, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Scott E. Drumm, of Hazleton, has been advanced to the presidency of the Pennsylvania State Elks' Association. He was succeeded as vice president by Frank J. Lyons, of Warren.

Hazleton was chosen last night for next year's meeting, after Williamsport withdrew its bid, assured it will get the 1936 convention. Grover C. Shoemaker, of Bloomsburg, succeeded Henry W. Gough, of Harrisburg, as treasurer.

'FOE' PRESENTS SCHNADER

BUTLER, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The victor and one of his defeated opponents for the Republican gubernatorial nomination appeared together last night at a rally of Butler Republicans.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, the party's nominee at the general election this November, was introduced by Thomas W. Phillips, Butler oil magnate, who opposed him in the May primary.

Schnader, in his address, termed federal apportionments of relief funds to Pennsylvania "unfair."

WOMAN BANDIT SHEARS VICTIM

DENVER, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The victim of a woman robber who slugged her, cut off part of her hair and left her bound with wire and gagged in her home, Mrs. Ferrol Wilcox, 23, was in a serious condition with a possible brain concussion today.

Police said Mrs. Wilcox told them she was alone in her home yesterday when she heard a woman's voice behind her command:

"Don't turn your head or I'll shoot."

The intruder forced her to pull down all the window shades, Mrs. Wilcox said, and lock the doors.

FOES OF TOLLS SEEK AID OF MOTOR CLUB

R. L. Freid, a representative of the Progressive and Citizens' leagues, and the Pittsburgh Motor Club, hit at the proposed Liberty Tube and plaza toll system yesterday in a meeting of directors of the club when their aid was sought by opponents of the plan.

Representatives of the Civic Federation of the South Hills declared the tolls would be "just another form of taxation which motorists would have to pay," and urged the directors to align themselves with the opponents of the plan.

No action was taken by the motor club, which advised speakers to file written arguments for later study.

Toll proponents were represented by W. W. Wasson, a real estate owner of Dormont and Mt. Lebanon, who stated that "the project as a whole will do more good than harm," and that money expended through the public works program of the Allegheny County Authority would multiply the original outlay 10 times.

M'NAIR TRAILS OUSTER 'PLOT'

The "plot" to impeach Mayor McNair remained very much of a deep, dark mystery today.

His honor, who exposed the alleged plan with the announcement that an attorney was collecting funds for the impeachment proceedings, had—by way of getting information—put himself in the position of being willing to contribute funds to his own ousting.

He declared he had represented himself over the telephone to the attorney as a "Mr. Smith," who was willing to contribute to an impeachment fund, but the attorney, he said, refused to accept any money except through a contact man.

The attorney he named denied that McNair had talked to him, and declared:

"Someone is trying to nail me to a cross."

He said neither he nor any of his clients was contemplating any impeachment proceedings.

Ban Police Cars As Convention Buses

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A trip of five Johnstown policemen to the American Legion convention at Erie has an echo in a new ordinance of City Council prohibiting the use of police cruiser automobiles on such expeditions in the future.

Councilmen passed the ordinance yesterday, after Mayor Eddie McCloskey sought to defend the policemen's action in accompanying this city's delegation to the conclave.

CALL PINCHOT 'CHEAT' IN ROW OVER RELIEF

Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania is guilty of a "cheap form of deception" in his controversy with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration over allotment of funds for emergency relief in Pennsylvania, FERA officials declared today. They branded as false the statements that the government had threatened to shut off all relief funds unless Pennsylvania should match the federal appropriations.

Although no official statement was made in Washington deputies connected with the administration offices declared that the government, by withholding portions of a letter from Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, has misrepresented the attitude of the government. They brand as false the impression that all federal funds would be cut off unless Pennsylvania—by a special session of Legislature—provided relief in equal amount.

For months the federal government has been carrying the entire burden in Pennsylvania, allotting ten and eleven millions each month, the state funds being exhausted.

Early in July Gov. Pinchot asked FERA officials about the prospects for relief this fall. Administrator Hopkins sent a long letter to Pinchot, explaining, it was said today, that the federal government would continue to provide at least half the usual amount for Pennsylvania relief. The letter further stated, it is asserted, that the government felt that Pennsylvania should take over some portion of the burden.

After receiving the letter Pinchot said:

"I have received a letter from Mr. Hopkins, but I have not made it public and I will not do so now for the reason that I have used every means in my power to avoid an extra session. I am continuing to do so."

CHARGE FACTS CONCEALED

Gov. Pinchot in the weeks that followed made no mention of assured federal money and continued to state that he saw no solution except a special session to raise emergency funds. He made several visits to Washington to appeal for additional funds.

A few days ago Pinchot received a letter from one of Administrator Hopkins's deputies, in which it was declared that the Governor apparently had the wrong impression. To clear up any misunderstanding, a copy of Administrator Hopkins's original letter was inclosed.

POLITICS :: By Mark Shields

Coleman to Show Hand On Steedle Case

Before the end of the week the attitude of the Republican County Committee toward Representative Joseph G. Steedle, a candidate for re-election in the Twelfth District, probably will be disclosed.

Mr. Shields

Steedle is to confer with County Chairman William H. Coleman, and within a day or two of their discussion Coleman will issue a statement on the situation, involving the demand of a number of independent Republicans that Steedle withdraw because of the two-year sentence given him by Federal Court, which he is appealing.

Coleman and Steedle, it is assumed, will take notice not only of the demand of Kenneth Ketchum, another Republican candidate, that Steedle retire, but also will note the protest petitions now being circulated through the district against the veteran's candidacy.

So far Steedle has been emphatic in his determination not to have his name taken from the ballot. His last expression on the subject was on the day that sentence was passed in Federal Court. He and his friends explain that he was renominated after having been indicted, and construe that as something of a vindication. Re-election now, they hold, would be an additional vindication following his conviction.

If the candidate maintains that attitude it is possible the regular organization will not go so far as to repudiate him.

Moritz Is Problem For Democrat Group

The Democrats of the regular organization in the Thirty-second congressional district also have a candidate they would prefer to be without, though in this position they are in sharp opposition to the desires of Mayor William N. McNair.

The candidate there is Theodore L. Moritz, the Mayor's secretary, nominated for Congress in a big field last May. The regular organization headed by David L. Lawrence was for Dr. Marion McKay, of the University of Pittsburgh, in the primary, but the big field of candidates proved an aid to Moritz.

The Republican candidate is the incumbent, M. J. Muldowney, supported by Senator James J. Coyne. Alexander H. Schullman has a nomination on the Independent ticket, and Mrs. Anne Felix, an old-line Democrat, not friendly to the organization, may run on another pre-empted ticket.

Mrs. Felix was a candidate against Muldowney two years ago, and out of this election bloomed the federal investigation which subsequently resulted in the conviction of members of many vote boards and was the basis of the trial of Senator James J. Coyne, the jury disagreeing in his case.

If neither Schullman nor Mrs. Felix should win, it would seem that they might get sufficient votes to split the anti-Republican total and insure the election of Muldowney. Of course, neither is a candidate on that basis, for each is opposed to the Republican organization, and each presumably figures a chance for victory.

O'Toole May Liven Congressional Fight

No Democrat will say it, of course, but there is more than a suspicion that the regulars of that party would prefer Muldowney to Moritz. This observation or accusation was put forth by Mayor McNair when he heard that there was tentative consideration of a plan to enter Attorney James L. O'Toole as a fifth candidate, backed by the Democratic organization. O'Toole was one of the assistant city solicitors who quit a short time ago with a verbal blast at the Mayor, the chief Moritz backer.

Just what the regular Democrats will do in the district has not yet been determined. If Schullman and Mrs. Felix remain in the fight it is doubtful if the Democrats will take any direct steps, but the subject still is under consideration, and O'Toole has not said definitely that he will not be a candidate.

It is a trifle early to talk about the county election of 1935, but the Republican organization appears set in its attitude on one office. Prothonotary John Vogt is not apt to be a candidate to succeed himself. Instead the organization probably will support C. J. McBride, now an employe of the Auditor General's office as well as treasurer of the Republican County Committee.

McBride would have been a candidate in 1931, but for the objections of the late County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who advised that he step aside. The situation has changed materially in four years and opposition has grown to Vogt, even should he not voluntarily decide to discontinue in office.

McBride was a former member of the Legislature, was chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and sponsored the present state boxing bill.

HIGHLAND PARK OPERA WORK UNDER WAY

Charles M. Stotz, architect, worked today on a scale model and plans for a proposed light opera auditorium in Highland Park following general discussion of the venture with a group which plans to form the Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera Association and operate the theater.

Former Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr., chairman of the association, yesterday named a federal loan committee, and business, publicity, and finance committees to launch the work.

Following the conference, Stotz, representing the firm of Edward Stotz, architects, said:

"I should like to visit and examine the outdoor light opera auditorium at St. Louis before making any definite plans. My instructions are to arrange for a seating capacity of 8,000 which will ultimately be increased to 10,000."

Stotz estimated the cost of such a building at $200,000.

In September the organization hopes to make a survey of the property with the aid of federal funds and then begin actual work. If plans materialize, parking space will be provided for 3,000 cars.

GRANGE FIGHTS NEW SESSION

HARRISBURG, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania farmer has joined the protest against a special General Assembly session to provide unemployment relief after August 31.

Through one of its strongest and best-known organizations, the State Grange, he has appealed to the federal government to forestall a special session by paying the state's relief bill until the regular Assembly meets in January.

The Grange cited Pennsylvania's tithe of the federal income as justification for the plea. A letter sent to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, said:

"It is manifestly unfair for the federal government to insist upon a 50-50 support of unemployment relief, when Pennsylvania is called upon to put up one-tenth of all the federal government raises in taxes."

The expenses of a special session of the Legislature, estimated at half a million dollars, was stressed.

NRA UNION HEAD GETS BACK JOB HE LOST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—John L. Donovan, youthful leader of white collar labor, got his NRA job back again today after the National Labor Relations Board ruled his discharge by Hugh S. Johnson was a "blow to legitimate union activities."

Dr. Gustave Peck, NRA official, bowed to the board's arbitration award, though disagreeing with it and declaring Johnson "in no way interfered" with the union. Peck said Donovan, who is president of the NRA union, could return to his post as technical adviser to the Blue Eagle's Labor Advisory Board. Peck varied:

"But he will have to toe the mark amd he will have to understand sthat some of the acts tolerated fnrom him in the past will no longer be orne."

No statement from Johnson was forthcoming immediately.

The National Labor Relations Board, "supreme court" of labor disputes, said in its award that Johnson's act was "not a conscious and deliberate attempt to cripple the self-organization of his employes." It decided Johnson's "objections was not to the union, but to being bothered by the union's delegations." It continued:

"But the case must be judged objectively and it is clear that Gen. Johnson's action on the 18th (of June), following upon his previous refusal to deal with Donovan except as an employe, must be considered in its effects, whatever the subjective intent, as a blow to legitimate union activities.

"Where the normal processes of presenting grievances to an employer are checked, if not destroyed, by the peremptory discharge of the union leader without warning, without even the suggestion of some alternative administrative procedure for handling grievances, and following upon refusal to meet a delegation in its representative capacity, we feel constrained to hold that such action amounts to an improper interference with union activity."

Donovan himself did not escape criticism. The board called some of his conduct "injudicious and needlessly provocative" and said Johnson was "justified in resenting" it.

36-HOUR WEEK IN COTTON CODE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—President Roosevelt, through an executive order, has shortened hours and raised wages under the cotton garment code, officials of the National Recovery Administration announced today.

The work week was reduced from 40 to 36 hours weekly with the same wages as previously ordered, to be paid to full time workers. Piece workers' wages were raised 10 per cent under the order.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union and a member of the Labor Advisory Board, characterized the order as the "most far-reaching step of importance taken by NRA to increase employment."

Officials who made the announcement said the move was of unusual significance inasmuch as it had been feared the Amalgamated Union might join the threatened strike of 300,000 textile workers, and that today's concession might forestall such development.

STRIKE PEACE OUSTS TROOPS

Associated Press.

The military returned Minneapolis to the citizenry today—the truck drivers' strike was over.

Agreement of the truck owners to take back strikers without discrimination paved way for the acceptance of peace plans advanced by federal negotiators. Shouting drivers last night announced the union's almost unanimous vote to return to work.

The strike outlook was darker in Chicago, where leaders of the week-old bus drivers' strike denied they had agreed to arbitrate.

In Washington President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, indorsed the proposed general strike in the textile industry and pledged the full cooperation of his organization.

Green's statement came almost simultaneously with disclosure that Robert W. Breure, chairman of the cotton textile industrial relations board, was drawing up a statement which might contain an outline of a plan for settling the textile controversy.

Union Warfare Bomb Wrecks Coal Train

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A bomb attributed to mine union rivalry was held responsible today for the wrecking of a freight train of 78 cars of coal on the Illinois Central tracks southeast of here.

The train, loaded with coal dug by United Mine Workers of America employed in the Midland coal fields at Taylorville, in Christian County, was en route to Springfield when the bomb exploded late last night.

Gun-Moll Fired For Dillinger Ballyhoo

MARY KINDER

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Mary Kinder, the gun-moll who claimed she loved Harry Pierpont, reputedly most ruthless of the John Dillinger disciples, is not going to be telling the World's Fair customers what a swell fellow Dillinger was until he was put out of circulation by government agents.

Mary was billed at the Bowery in an act called "Crime Doesn't Pay." In it she was to tell how she knew Dillinger and what a "great guy" he was. But then Nathaniel A. Owings, director of concessions, got wind of what was going on. A word with his chief investigator and they caught Mary's first act.

One was enough. Without much hesitation, Owings tore down the signs advertising Mary's appearance and forthwith escorted the gun-moll from the premises.

NAB 6 AS GANG SLAYS 'TRAITOR'

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Detectives of the homicide squad seized six men in a raid on a small hotel early today and rushed them to headquarters for questioning in connection with the slaying yesterday of Charles Feigenbaum, paroled smuggler.

Detectives who made the arrests said five of the men taken into custody were United States citizens and the other was a Canadian. Authorities expressed fear that United States gangsters were seeking a haven in Montreal.

Feigenbaum was shot to death as he stepped from his automobile late yesterday, the second man to be killed by gang methods here within two weeks.

Feigenbaum turned king's evidence in a recent drug-smuggling case that convicted Harry Davis, Montreal night club owner. Davis was sentenced to 14 years imprisonment, 10 lashes and $10,000 in fines.

PRESIDENT PAYS LAST TRIBUTE TO RAINEY

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt rode his special train across the Midwest today to pay the last tribute to the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey in the little farm community of Carrollton, Ill.

The smile that usually is on the face of the President was absent as he traveled to the funeral of his close friend and strong supporter.

He was accompanied only by his immediate assistants. If his thoughts were on the future leadership of the next House, he did not disclose it.

The White House had taken care to keep the route of the train a secret, but people were on hand at every stop to greet the President.

The presidential train was due to arrive in Carrollton some time this afternoon. After the funeral the President leaves immediately for Washington. He will go to Hyde Park Saturday night.

They don't want to bring back druids, or Wotan, or Siegfried, or drink human blood from a cup made of the top of an enemy's skull.

Ninety per cent of Germans want to continue the civilization of Goethe, Schiller, Humboldt, Helmholtz, Hegel and Virchow. And that is what they will do, when this attack of foolishness shall have passed.

MRS. TED GLOVIER, of Moorfield, Va., weighs 120 pounds, her husband weighs 135 pounds, not that his weight makes much difference. Their little boy, named, as you will guess, Franklin Delano Glovier, just arrived, weighs 14 pounds. Franklin Delano Glovier will not attract as much attention as do the five Dionne quintuplets. But the mother is proud of the fact that her Franklin Delano weighs at birth one pound and a half more than all five of the quintuplets." Franklin Delano Glovier's father says: "I can't account for it." No accounting is necessary. Every baby, big or little, is a marvel, and weight at birth makes little difference. One sickly little baby called Voltaire started a work that overthrew a long line of fat French kings.

NEW YORK presents to your attention an interesting robbery in the Borough of Brooklyn. A well organized gang of eleven highwaymen surrounded an armored car with machine guns carefully planted in a peddler's cart and in parked cars, held up the armed guards, stole four hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars.

THE ROBBERS escaped in three high-powered automobiles, the armored truck pursuing, one machine gun that the robbers had overlooked, spitting futile bullets.

That appears to be the record for robbery in the public streets. The eleven bandits will regret to hear that, in addition to overlooking one machine gun, they overlooked $29,000 in cash.

A BIG DIAMOND is coming to the United States, fourth largest in the world, called the Jonker gem. The "pebble" was found in South Africa by a farmer, and sold to the diamond corporation for $315,000. The corporation refused $500,000 for the stone, now coming here to be cut to best advantage. Ladies will wear diamonds as big as pigeons' eggs, but hardly as big as a turkey's egg, that would be conspicuous.

5 MEN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Five men were injured in a collision today in which two cars overturned and one caught fire at South Twenty-sixth and Jane streets.

Several of the victims were thrown from the autos and the driver of one was forced to crawl from the wreckage.

Those injured were: Robert Stropp, 30, of 229 Sterling street, driver of one of the autos; Walter Nagel, 29, of 2432 Spring street; Aloysius Lang, 66, of 2114 Salisbury street, and Albert Miller, 24, of 48 South Twenty-seventh street, his passengers, and Mike Muehlbauer, 19, of 320 Dengler street, driver of the other car. Miller was treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for a possible fractured leg and pelvic injury and the others were taken to South Side Hospital.

When the two autos crashed, Stropp's caught fire and an alarm was sounded. Stropp crawled from the flaming wreckage of his machine. Police charged both drivers with reckless driving.

Stropp and his passengers were returning from work at the time.

MME. STAVISKY SEES CHILDREN

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Her foot bandaged to simulate injury, Mme. Arlette Stavisky, pretty widow of the late Serge Stavisky, was released from jail last night long enough for her two children to visit her in a private hospital.

They are ignorant of the fact she is in jail, thinking she is in a hospital and their father visiting in the United States. After an hour's happy visit, the children left, still ignorant of the little drama staged for their benefit.

Mme. Stavisky was arrested in February in the investigation of the pawnshop scandal caused by her husband's financial operations. He had killed himself several weeks earlier.

Senator's Daughter, MacArthur Kin Wed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Military and official society joined in attending the wedding yesterday of Miss Laura Louise Barkley, daughter of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, and Douglas MacArthur, a nephew of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Army chief of staff.

Among those present at the ceremony at the Barkley home were Secretary and Mrs. Roper, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Corporation, and R. Walter Moore, assistant secretary of state.

Judge Orders Him to Jail To Sleep

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—Francis Doyle, 27, was sent to county jail here until Saturday to catch up on his sleep.

On that day he will be given a hearing on complicity in the holdup of a fur shop.

The decree was issued by Judge Otto R. Heiligman when told by defence attorney that the prisoner had not had a wink since he was arrested Friday. Attorney Stevenson charged the man has been constantly transferred from one police station house to another while detectives continually questioned him.

Cruising Policeman Finds Mother Shot

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Patrolman George Doane, cruising in a radio car today, answered a shooting alarm in the Bronx when he recognized the address as his own and found his young nephew had accidentally shot his mother.

The boy, Warren Stafford, 7, found a rifle in a closet and announced he was going to be "a cop." A shot roared out and the boy's grandmother, Mrs. Helen Doane, slumped with a wound in the abdomen.

GIVES HICCOUGH VICTIM PEACE

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—The hiccoughing Mrs. Homer McCormick has suffered from for the past 20 days had subsided today.

Under control but not definitely ended, the hiccoughs were few and far between.

Complete relief for several hours at a time was experienced by Mrs. McCormick after Dr. David Miller, consulting with Dr. E. D. Quillen, devised a method of applying pressure to her side.

Remedies suggested by letters and a hundred callers at the McCormick home failed to produce any results. Dr. Quillen said:

"Mrs. McCormick's is a deep-seated condition which the ordinary hiccough 'cure' does not touch."

NUDE GAMBOLER IN PARK FINED

A one-man nudist colony was arraigned before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Morals Court today with two women appearing as the complaining witnesses.

Walter Melvin, 21, of 1113 Marshall avenue, was fined $5 or five days in jail after the young women told of coming upon him quite unexpectedly yesterday as he gamboled around Riverview Park unhindered by wearing apparel.

Melvin, who readily admitted the girls were right, said he "just couldn't help it," so Magistrate McGowan assessed the fine.

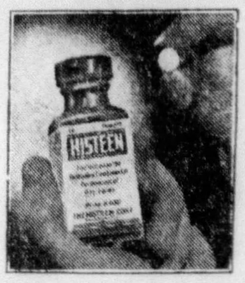
DOCTOR* DISCOVERS AMAZING NEW TREATMENT FOR

HAY FEVER SUFFERING

Says Pollens Cause a Body Poison and Finds New Short-Cut Way to Combat Its Effect

RELIEF IS SO THOROUGH IT IS ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE, Say Thousands

REPORT SNEEZING STOPS, ITCHING, FEVERISH SYMPTOMS GONE!



A CHICAGO doctor has simplified the complicated "pollen theory" of hay fever to one single idea. And reduced its treatment to one simple method, with results so prompt and so thorough that almost overnight, thousands say they found in it a remarkable answer to their hay fever suffering. Again and again they reported wonderful absence of feverish headaches, itching membranes and wretched breathing after the first few doses and right through all of last season!

Amazing New Facts

This doctor thoroughly believes in the theory newly advanced by medical science that hay fever results directly from a poisonous substance found in the blood. Regardless of what pollens the patient was sensitive to, the doctor's findings indicate this body poison was always present. "It is the poisoning caused by pollens—not the pollens themselves—which is the underlying cause of hay fever suffering," reasoned the doctor.

"Short-Cut" Treatment Found

After two and one-half years of research, this doctor perfected Histeen—a safe preparation which promptly acts to neutralize the effects of this body poison. Reports show that often within a few minutes after the first dose relief from hay fever symptoms has followed.

And the remarkable thing is that Histeen continued to be effective on repeated doses—so rapid that relief in some cases appeared almost immediately; and so thorough that all apparent symptoms had disappeared.

These findings were verified by independent scientific tests in the laboratories of a famous medical university. Then it was given to the public in certain cities with results that seemed almost unbelievable to hay fever sufferers. It is "marvelous, amazing, beyond anything in their experience," say thousands.

Now Histeen is available in drug stores everywhere. It is taken internally, in convenient tablet form, and contains no dangerous drugs of any kind. No sprays or salves are necessary. Will not interfere with any other treatment. Get a bottle today. See if it does not give you the same swift, marvelous kind of relief you get on the first cool fall days. See too, if you do not experience this swift, cool relief from feverish symptoms—itching membranes, running nose and watery eyes. And see if it does not let you go through the entire season, gloriously free from the relentless torture of hay fever.

IRISH RUMORS FLY AS STRIKE BANS PAPERS

DUBLIN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Mongers of rumors are having a gorgeous time of it these days by originating fantastic stories which received the widest word-of-mouth publicity.

It's because the Irish Free State is without its principal newspapers, owing to a printers' strike which has been effective nearly a month.

The wilder these blarney-born rumors are, the quicker they spread and the more difficult they are to scout.

President De Valera is seriously ill . . . Shots have been fired at Jimin O'Duffy . . . King George has intervened in the economic war . . .

That's a taste of the rumors, and they fly about promiscuously with no safeguard of the press to stop them.

Even the local celebrities of Dublin are not exempt. There is the instance of the popular dance band leader who was reported dead in an automobile accident. He thought that was funny and laughed with his friends about it. But he doesn't laugh about it any more; he found the dance promoters, having no use for dead men, had heard the rumor, too, and wiped him off their lists.

The mercantile world also is seriously affected, for the merchants have been compelled to forego newspaper advertising and to resort to posters and sandwichmen.

Meanwhile, the public is clamoring for reliable news and deluging the official radio station for additional bulletins which have been increased in number but still are only a drop in the bucket of information which the public craves. The people are crying for more and the government fears to supply the want lest it be charged with taking sides in the strike dispute.

'SUICIDE' FLIER LANDS IN CELL

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Frank Dorbandt, famed Alaska flier, was safely back in Anchorage today—in jail.

His return late yesterday ended the mystery of his disappearance and talk of an "aerial suicide." It likewise ended search of a rugged territory, inspired by his strange threat. "You'll never see me again," shouted as he took the air here Sunday night in his big tri-motored plane.

The hero of a hundred northland adventures said he left on his mystery flight in a fit of anger because Aeronautics Inspector Murray Hall ordered him grounded for breaking aviation regulations. The intervening two days he spent on Susitna River, 60 miles away.

Waiting for Dorbandt's return was a deputy marshal, who escorted him to jail. Bondsmen on whose bond the aviator had been at liberty under federal fur smuggling charges had withdrawn their backing.

HUEY BUNGLES LAW TO DISARM NEW ORLEANS

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—"Huey's slick, but he slips up sometimes."

Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, a strapping six-footer in his favorites who once captained the Tulane football team, chuckled with boyish enthusiasm.

The Louisiana Legislature, summoned by command of Senator Huey P. Long, had passed, in a ribald, raucous, fist-fighting session, 26 measures aimed at hamstringing the city administration of New Orleans for its rebellion against Long's political dictatorship.

Walmsley had just heard the official wording of those measures.

Huey was slick, but not quite slick enough, the Mayor asserted.

LONG MEASURE FAILS

The measure by which Long sought to insure the complete subjugation of Walmsley and his powerful "city ring," through close limitation of its gasoline power, fails by a simple subterfuge, Walmsley told International News Service.

In the final hours of that hectic special session, with measure after measure approved to aid Long in crushing his enemies, the Legislature, under Long's personal direction, clamped an amendment on Section 16 of the New Orleans city charter. It read:

"No special officer or special policeman appointed by the Commission Council, the Mayor, the City of New Orleans, or any officer or employe of said city or by their authority shall have the right to carry arms as such without the approval of the Governor."

When the state militia moved into New Orleans on July 30 and seized the City Registration Office containing the voters rolls for the September 11 election, Walmsley, in retaliation, mustered in and heavily armed 535 special policemen in addition to a force of 800 regulars.

EXTRA POLICE FORCE

It was at this force, and to insure Walmsley being powerless to defend himself against the state administration's inroads, that the amendment was directed.

But Walmsley gleefully pointed out, there is nothing in the amendment that prevents the employment of supernumerary policemen. And this, he said, is precisely the category of the force of 535 policemen recently hired. And Walmsley says the force may be increased.

As for the legislative probe expected to begin next week into Long's charges of graft, corruption and vice in the city government, Walmsley said he "wasn't in the least bothered and hadn't given it a single thought."

Birdmen to Stage Plane Contests At South Park During County Fair

MISS ARMELLA HOHMAN WITH A MODEL OF A FAST U. S. ARMY P-26 . . . IT WILL FLY AUG. 31

Thousands Expected To See Races; Prizes Ready

Two spectacular model airplane contests are going to be staged at South Park next week during the County Fair.

One is a fuselage plane contest, the other is a speed contest which will be the first ever held in this part of the country.

The fuselage meet is next Wednesday at 3 p. m. and the speed contest is two days later, Friday August 31, at 4 p. m.

Both meets are being held by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing of the Junior Birdmen of America. Thousands of persons are expected to watch them.

Important rules in the fuselage contest are as follows:

1—The wing area must be between 125 and 175 square inches.

2—The largest cross section of the body must be one-tenth of the length "squared"—or the length of the plane "squared" divided by 100.

The speed contest is open to any type and any construction of plane. Models in both meets must take off minature runway.

Contestants can enter as many ships in either contest as they desire.

Central Airlines is awarding the prizes in the fuselage meet, while the Sun-Telegraph is awarding a Brown, Jr., model plane gas motor as first prize in the speed meet.

Many Junior Birdmen have already entered both of the South Park contests and have been sent their racing numbers.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 22.—Dazed by a bolt of lightning which struck his barn while he was feeding stock, Edward Fierst, 50, of Unity Township, was carried by his three sons from the structure as it caught fire.

The youths also formed a bucket brigade and succeeded in saving the barn which was set on fire in two different places by the bolt.

Cripple Shoots Brother in Feud

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Police charge a 19-year-old crippled youth, Thomas Cunningham, shot and seriously wounded his brother, Michael, 24, in the back today, because Michael hit their mother.

Detectives said the shooting was the outgrowth of a feud dating back several years to the time Michael struck his mother a blow which necessitated an operation.

BARRY DEATH QUIZ PRESSED BY CORONER

Still unable to agree with city detectives that an accident caused the death of former Police Inspector John Barry, Coroner William J. McGregor has ordered the investigation to be continued. He declared no date will be set for an inquest until the investigation is finished.

McGregor spent more than two hours yesterday in conference with Lieut. Franklin T. McQuaide, of the Homicide Squad and City Detective William McCready, ballistic expert.

The detectives are of the opinion that Barry was accidentally shot when unloading a rifle from his automobile. He was found dead in his garage in the rear of his home in Hallet street last week, a bullet wound in the head.

The rifle which is said to have caused death was once owned by Detective McCready. McCready said when the gun was in his possession he had "eased" the mechanism of the trigger, making it possible to easily discharge the weapon. McCready sold the gun 12 years ago to Edward Brophy, former Police Superintendent and life-long friend of Barry.

McQuaide said he would continue to devote his entire personal attention to the investigation for the remainder of the week before reporting officially to Coroner McGregor.

STATE TO OPEN SAFETY DRIVE

A state wide safety campaign of three months, beginning September 1, is to be launched by all state departments with co-operation of hundreds of clubs and organizations, according to an announcement by Gov. Pinchot.

Although in the past there have been highway safety campaigns, industrial safety drives and drives for safety in the home and school, all have been separate and distinct movements. The new campaign will be many drives in one.

Motor clubs, service clubs and civic organizations throughout the state have been asked to cooperate. The National Safety Council estimates that out of every 100 boys and girls hurt in accidents, 34 were injured at home, 18 on school grounds, 17 in school buildings, 19 on the way to and from school, and 22 at other places.

BANK TO QUIT, NO PROFITS

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The 7,000 depositors of the Sixty-third and Halsted Streets Savings Bank are requested to "come and get it." The bank intends to close and pay everybody, C. H. Dehning, the president, says:

"There are no profits in banking under present conditions. The directors have decided that the thing to do is to pay off all depositors and go out of business."

The deposits total $700,000.

Closing of the bank will leave the Englewood district of Chicago with but two banks, and one of them notified its depositors recently that accounts of less than $100 are unprofitable and small depositors would be given a nice fountain pen if they'd take their money somewhere else.

Cult's History Depicted by Paintings

THE HARMONY SOCIETY

Young Beaver Artist Uses Portraits As Models

Part of the quaint history of the Harmony Society, which developed from a small penniless group to a multi-millionaire community, has been depicted in oils for the students of Ambridge High School, Ambridge.

Artist Kenah

Started as one of the government art works, the panel was completed about February 1 by Richard H. Kenah, young Beaver, Pa., artist.

Using portraits as models for the figures, Kenah painted George Rapp, founder of the community, in the center of his panel separating the men and women of the community.

This was symbolical of the community's belief in celibacy to prepare themselves for the second coming of Christ, a belief which practically caused the death of the community because there were no children to carry on.

The society's last community at Economy, near Ambridge, is now a state museum, where portraits of the leaders, including Jacob Henrici and John S. Duss, last head of the society, hang in the Great Hall.

Kenah's canvas, 18 feet by seven feet, will be hung as soon as two other panels are completed. One of the others, showing Logstown and the Washington Trail, is nearing completion. The third will show "Growth of Industry."

HITLER DRIVE ON CHURCHES DENIED

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Alfred Rosenberg, Chancellor Adolf Hitler's general commissioner for things cultural and philosophical in Germany, today vigorously refuted charges that he is spearheading a crusade against the church.

And with equal emphasis he defended the freedom of scientific fields in Nazi Germany.

In an exclusive interview with International News Service, Rosenberg, who has often been accused in Catholic quarters of being their "chief enemy," explained at length the Nazi attitude toward church freedom in view of the present conflict as well as Nazi ideas of the position of science in relation to the Hitler regime.

UNITY HELD AIM

The tall and handsome culture chieftain in his smart office, said:

"The leader has declared more than once that he will never encroach upon the denominational freedom of churches.

"What has happened in the Protestant churches was nothing but reorganizing of all those fragments of church organizations based upon our former regional disjointed condition.

"What may have brought about certain misunderstandings is only the fact that (very much to our regret), a great many Jewish scientists as well as even misled Germans had confounded freedom of research with freedom to calumnify the German name.

CITES 'PROTEST'

"If, for instance, a certain Mr. Einstein professes the White Race has no claim to superiority to the Negro and even tries to start a revolt of the colonial people against the White Race, such deviation has nothing to do with scientific freedom of research.

"Einstein as a matter of fact is nothing but a Bolshevik agent.

"We demand that the German nation, as well as any other nation, has the right to determine its own moral standpoint and position."

The Nazis, however, Dr. Rosenberg said, "are strictly protesting against claims of old established church bodies to encroach upon those smaller denominations by trying to abuse the political strength of our government for that purpose."

What's Going to Happen to Those 4 Million Voters?

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Those four million votes were astounding in Germany's chaotic presidential campaign.

Still, as Hitler says, "they may have been against me, but they weren't for nobody else."

If four million got up enough nerve to vote against Adolf then we claim a gang of Mock Eastman's old-time repeaters could have won that election.

The question now is, What's going to happen to those four million? An high command says they must be converted. And it doesn't mean converted into long-term bonds.

Mussolini gave them castor oil, and we imagine that Adolf has a mixture that will make that seem like the nectar of the gods.

NAZIS REVIVING POISON DOOM

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Germany may revive the old Greek custom of giving a condemned person a cup of hemlock substituting suicide for execution.

A committee on reform of German penal law has made this recommendation, mentioning a loaded pistol in addition to poison as another way out.

The possibility of admitting duels as a form of settling "man-to-man" disputes was discussed in this connection. The committee recommended that no legal punishment be exacted for dueling.

The principle of suicide for condemned persons failed in its first application in the Third Reich during the June 30 "blood purge" when Ernst Roehm, chief of staff of the Nazi Storm Troops, refused to pull a trigger on himself and was shot.

MUTINY CHARGE FACES NAZI CRITICS

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The word "mutiny," a grim one when Nazi ranks were purged by bullets June 30, reappeared today in a warning to party members.

Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio, threatened expulsion to Nazis who address grievances about "petty" matters and make them to public authorities instead of to various party headquarters.

Hess issued the warning at Munich, scene of most of the recent revolutionary plotting and headquarters of the Nazi Storm Troops. He said:

"I expect every party comrade to assume full responsibility for every letter of protest he has and not to lend his name to lists that are to be considered mutiny."

To judge a protest about party affairs with public authorities, he said, showed a "lack of confidence and a lack of discipline toward leaders named by Der Fuehrer (Chancellor Hitler)."

Scores, possibly hundreds, throughout the Reich, it was understood, including many intellectuals and former Communist and Socialist workers, were placed into custody on the day of the recent plebiscite as a preventive measure. Most of them have since been released, it was believed. The arrests, however, were denied by the propaganda ministry.

Press comment indicated the Nazi leadership continues to take seriously the minority of "nein" votes cast in the plebiscite against Hitler's assumption of presidential powers.

Discussing the privilege of criticism at length, Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, in an interview in the Allgemeine Zeitung concludes:

"Before our leader, Adolf Hitler, all criticism subsides. If Der Fuehrer calls commands, every man must obey implicitly, no matter who he is."

New Dealers Prefer Sam Rayburn for Speakership

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Off the record, the White House crowd would like to see Sam Rayburn get the speakership off the House.

Mr. Mallon

The liberal New Dealers are especially hot for him. He was closer to them in backstage dope the last session than any other member of the House. He pieced at least half their legislative program through Congress.

Even the Roosevelt-to-come advisers, Vice President Garner and Jesse Jones, RFC, are privately rooting for him.

You might think that with all this rah-rah backing, he is a cinch for the job, but he is not. The New Dealers dare not campaign openly for him, or even confess publicly that they are for him. The White House particularly must keep its hands out of the matter unless it chooses to offend a dozen other good Democrats already in the race.

MISSIONARY WORK

Consequently, the matter is very much in doubt and will remain so until the caucus of House Democrats meets in January to choose Speaker Rainey's successor.

A little cautious missionary work is being done among some House Democrats by New Dealers who have no official position in the administration, but they are carefully watching their steps.

As things stack up now, it appears most likely that Floor Leader Byrns will become Speaker and that Rayburn may be chosen floor leader although he will have strong competition from Congressman Bankhead, of Alabama, and perhaps others.

METHODS

Outsiders may have difficulty understanding why the administration cannot choose its own Congressional leaders when it is in control.

The truth is that Congressional leaders are chosen for every other reason except advocacy of administration principles. The dominant influence in their choice usually is personal politics.

As a rule, the eligible candidates line up a personal following among House members by promising appointments to important committee assignments and other personal favors if elected.

If support thus accumulated is not sufficient for the election of any one man, the leading candidates ordinarily negotiate among themselves.

Two candidates usually decide to pool their support so one can become Speaker and the other floor leader. If the White House tries to mix in, it usually gets its fingers burned.

BYRNS

All this does not mean that the downtown New Dealers here have anything against Floor Leader Byrns. The Rainey-Byrns dynasty was not very popular with the downtown New Dealers at the middle of the last session, but, by the time the session ended, misunderstandings over the bonus and other minor matters had been fairly well cleared up.

The main trouble with the House Democrats last session was that in their ranks were a number of men who never should have been elected to Congress. They were not of Congressional caliber. They did not expect to be elected, but were swept in, to their own amazement, on the Roosevelt tidal wave.

GERMAN ELECTION

Reading the German election returns was a waste of time. It even our officials privately considered it so.

Strategists they thought, first probably gave the voters a fairly honest count. Not because they considered the Nazis above a little fast coupling, but rather because there was no reason for much of it. They had the situation well in hand without it.

If a really honest election had been held, our boys believe, Hitler would have received a majority. They were rather surprised that the returns showed so much Hitler opposition to Catholic centers. This was undoubtedly due to the recent murder of the Catholic leader.

The only thing the election proved for sure, however, is that the Hitler election technique cannot be beaten. Only Nazi officials were in charge at the polls. Only the minister of propaganda for Hitler collected the votes and announced the result.

That even beats the Vare system in Philadelphia.

AILMENTS OF MEN AND WOMEN!
The most common and repulsive ailments of mankind. Why should you go around through life suffering from skin ailments? Even your best friends will shun you! Surely if your face and body are covered with unsightly eruptions and blotches.
All skin troubles have an underlying cause. Our examinations generally disclose the cause and with the aid of our direct-blood treatment methods, and local skin-penetrating treatments, we are achieving splendid results. Don't delay another day, come and talk with our many satisfied patients.
Eczema, blotches, eruptions, rashes, itching, burning, open sores are now treated on a scientific and safe plan. We treat the cause and not the symptoms. Our charges always moderate. Thorough physical examination, $5.

NAME WINNERS OF CONTESTS

Terming the demonstration by bands and drill teams at the American Legion convention at Erie as the greatest ever staged in the Department of Pennsylvania, Ben Giffen, state chairman of competitions, announced awards today.

He pointed out that the first four among Class A drum and bugle corps, Tarentum, Uniontown, Greensburg, and Houston, have never failed to reach the finals in national contests and said he doubted any other state could turn out as great an aggregation as the 750 who took part in the various events.

Duquesne drum and bugle corps won the Class B championship and Wilkes-Barre Post No. 6 was first among the Class A bands, followed by Clearfield No. 132.

The military band from Scranton Post 121 placed first in Class B competition, followed by Scottdale Post 240, second, and Mahanoy City Post 74, third.

DIONNE BABIES AGAIN GAIN

CALLANDER, Ontario, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Gains in weight were made yesterday by all the Dionne quintuplets for an aggregate increase of 4¼ ounces. The babies are 86 days old today.

Cecile led with a gain of 1½ ounces while little Marie was right behind with 1¼ ounces.

Something to Say
—not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click with them . . . that they're milder and taste better. I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

WOMEN TRAIL GIRL'S SLAYER ON COAST

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 25.—(AP)—The women's "Committee of 600," organized here recently to combat crime, took a hand today in the investigation of the attack-slaying of 16-year-old Celia Cota.

While officers of the city and county worked on two leads in the slaying of last Friday, members of the women's group conferred with the Sheriff and parents of the dead girl.

Police today worked on a theory Miss Cota, whose mutilated and ravished body was found at the rear of her home, may have been the victim of a gang. A group of men had been seen in Balboa Park, near the girl's home, several days before the tragedy. They were said to have been seen in the vicinity the afternoon before Friday night when the girl went for a walk from which she did not return alive.

Another lead concerned the actions and whereabouts of a man who resides near the Cota home. Both leads appear "good," said Joe Lopez, captain of detectives.

Officers yesterday believed they were on the trail of the slayer when a local cleaning and pressing establishment turned in a pair of light gray trousers bearing several red spots, which at first were thought to be blood. The spots were blood, but not human blood, a chemical analysis revealed.

No sooner had this lead been discarded than a second pair of trousers, bearing blood spots and belonging to a sailor, were found. The spots were found to be human blood, but the sailor, with the aid of his commanding officers and naval records, proved an alibi and was released.

FEW JEWS HERE LINKED TO REDS

Only 50 persons in Pittsburgh's Jewish population of 45,000 are Communists, the magazine "American Hebrew and Jewish Tribune" stated today in an article denying that American Jews were leaders of the Communist movement.

The magazine, published in New York, attributed the movement to blame the Jews of America for Communism on:

"The slimy but invisible hand of Hitlerism."

Less than one-eighth of the district and section organizers of the Communist party are Jews, and only four or five of the 35 members of the Central Committee, supreme ruling body, are Jews, the article stated.

Wife Will Win Governorship, Langer Says

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—(AP)—William Langer, deposed Governor of North Dakota, says his wife is going to be elected as the state's chief executive and "you can bet your boots she won't be any rubber stamp governor."

"She's a red-head," he explained here before leaving for Decatur, Ill., to continue his speaking tour "to bring home the plight of the farmers to the people who don't know anything about it." He added:

"She's going to make a real campaign even if she never had any political experience until she got aroused after I had been persecuted by my political enemies."

Langer will end his speaking tour about September 1, when he will return to North Dakota to campaign for his wife, the Republican gubernatorial nominee.

Bennett Lured By British Film Offer

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Richard Bennett, veteran American actor and father of Constance and Joan Bennett, who have made a name for themselves in the films, is planning to remain in England indefinitely.

RICHARD BENNETT

He is planning to sign a long term contract with the Allied Film Productions here. He said:

"I like England and I have a fine offer with a long contract beginning November. I think I'll sign. Why should I return to Hollywood and be bothered when I can stay here and not be bothered by anything."

His plans to return to New York for an Al Woods play have been given up. Bennett is now working on a film entitled "Eighteen Minutes," which will occupy him until November.

AMOS 'N' ANDY :-: Byrd Men Celebrate :-: ON RADIO

Dennis King Returns To Air

Their wives, spanking an ocean and a continent, Amos 'n' Andy will return to the air for a one-time broadcast and mutual swapping of yarns, jests tonight.

In the initiation of a two-way conversation with the radio eavesdroppers taking everything in, the broadcast will cover 6,000 miles with Amos back from a sojourn in Alaska talking from San Francisco, and Andy winding up a tour of England, going on the air from London.

The air reunion of the veteran team, quarter for to first time in eight years of aerial partnership, will be a curtain raiser to the opening September 17 of a new series of Amos 'n' Andy broadcasts. The former, so they say, will spend his share of the allotted quarter-hour endeavoring, with a mere words, to make his partner visualize the size of the one-ers that got away, while Andy, always the financier, will describe Isaac's struggles with pounds, shillings and pence.

They are spotted at their regular hour—7 p. m.—with waiting over their accustomed facilities, NBC-blue and KDKA.

Crossing the paath of the Amos 'n' Andy special will be aerial hallelujahs from the little party which for months has been living in Antarctic darkness.

Hailing the return of the sun today members of the Byrd Expedition will celebrate the end of winter during Columbia's weekly Little America packup at 10, relayed locally by WJAS.

A feature of tonight's broadcast will be an effort to pick up a message in code from Admiral Byrd, now recuperating from a long illness 123 miles south of Little America.

DENNIS KING STARS

One of the first of the 1934 fall boom programs comes to the air over NBC-KDKA at 10, bringing Dennis King, the swashbuckling stage and screen hero, to the microphone in a new type of musical-dramatic presentation.

Playing opposite the popular star of "The Vagabond King" and "Richard of Bordeaux" will be Rosaline Greene, radio actress who recently celebrated her 2,000th performance on the ether channels.

Also of interest on the current horizon are an address by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, contituting a review of six-week offical tour of Alaska and the Pacific Northwest, WCAE at 11:30, a discussion having to do with beautification of Pittsburgh's wharves and river improvements by Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer Department of Public Works, KDKA at 10:15, and guest starring of Cissie Loftus, veteran stage favorite, on Everett Marshall's "Vanities," WJAS at 8:30.

WYNN A FIREMAN

Somebody will go to all the trouble of building a fire tomorrow afternoon just so Ed Wynn can don his fireman's hat and put it out. A feature of the International Firemen's Convention at a Century of Progress, the doings will be wafted by NBC over the WJZ net at 4:15.

Station WFBG, Altoona's "Voice of the Alleghenies," celebrates its tenth birthday Friday. While operating on only 100 watts, the station has received reception reports from Havana, Australia and New Zealand. Roy Thompson is managing director.

Ceremonies attending the award of 24 university scholarships to winners of the fourth annual scholarship competition of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild will be wafted by CBS-WJAS at 9:30 tonight. Edwin C. Hill will be master of ceremonies.

Highlighting fare for the daytime dialers tomorrow will be an international broadcast from the famed Salzburg Music Festival of a symphonic program conducted by Arturo Toscanini. The time is 3:15, WCAE will transmit.

Follies Bluist

From the rank and file of Ziegfeld beauties is Vivien Janier, blues singer and former protege of Ben Bernie. She's featured with Leon Belasco, will enter radio's Hall of Fame next Sunday.

Col. McGovern On WCAE

Col. Charles C. McGovern, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, will be interviewed by the Sun-Telegraph "Aircaster" tomorrow evening over WCAE at 6:35. He will discuss the County Fair, which opens at South Park, August 28, and continues through Labor Day.

Pittsburgher Named Catholic Verein Head

John Eibeck, of Pittsburgh, has been elected president of the Catholic Central Verein, meeting in Rochester, N. Y., and Frank Stifter, of Carnegie, was elected assistant secretary.

Tch, Tch! Writer Snoops On Couple In Love —And Tells

By AIRCASTER

She's only 16 and going back to college in the autumn, and her boy friend isn't more than a year older. They swing in the hammock when there's a moon, and, under its spell, their conversation is as interesting as an eaves-dropper as it is to them. They meet almost every night. The boy friend comes calling to the porch of the Park avenue pent house. Sometimes they turn on the radio and sit quietly if it happens that there's a romantic play on the air.

If they should perchance tune in on the radio September 15 and happen to stumble upon the NBC station, where "The Gibson Family," the new script by Courtney Riley Cooper, will launch itself, I am afraid they will be embarrassed—and that the porch will lose its popularity as a rendezvous. Decidedly, the show will be a shock to this young couple in love, for the dialogue will echo, in detail, their small talk and sweet nothings for months past.

The truth is, all unknowing, this couple has provided the author with his cript. For Mr. Cooper resides in another penthouse, within easy earshot of the lovers' nook, and has taken down (what a mean trick!) notes on the conversation, with especial regard for their modern phrases. A palliating note will be supplied by the original music which has been scored by Arthur Schwartz, who likewise spent several evenings eavesdropping on the unsuspecting pair for inspiration.

ORIGIN: LIFE

It is always such inspiration as provided by this to-be-embarrassed young couple which insures simplicity and realism. And it is always simplicity and realism which guarantees a successful script. Hence eavesdropping, for the purpose of augmenting life, is hardly to be called skullduggery.

It was unintentional eavesdropping on a Bronx family which moved Gertrude Berg to invent "The Goldbergs," darky dialect in Richmond that brought Amos 'n' Andy to the air; actual occurrences in their own home which supplied Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dixon with the series, "Raising Junior," and finally, family huddles in the Irish section at Rockaway Beach, which supplied Jane West with that swell serial, "The O'Neills." Jane actually went there at the suggestion of her manager to copy the characters. "Mrs. O'Neill," by the way, is Kate McComb, who plays "Mrs. Kerrigan" in "The Goldbergs."

AERIAL CURFEW

It becomes no small problem each year for the studios to find work for sustaining talent which has kept things going during the summer. When fall comes the airlanes are crowded with commercial shows and the unsponsored performers are nudged aside. This fall there are so few open spots that it will be necessary for the networks to curtail their sustaining staffs.

Columbia will be first to take the step which will be unfortunate for half a dozen or more sustaining artists. They will, it is unpleasant to report, be dropped within a couple of weeks. Among them are at least three fairly "big names."

Local Highlights On WJAS

Bob Hughan's band, new to local radio circles, is heard for a second time on WJAS tonight at 6:15.

Gregorio Scaizo's Ensemble plays an all-request program tonight at 6:45.

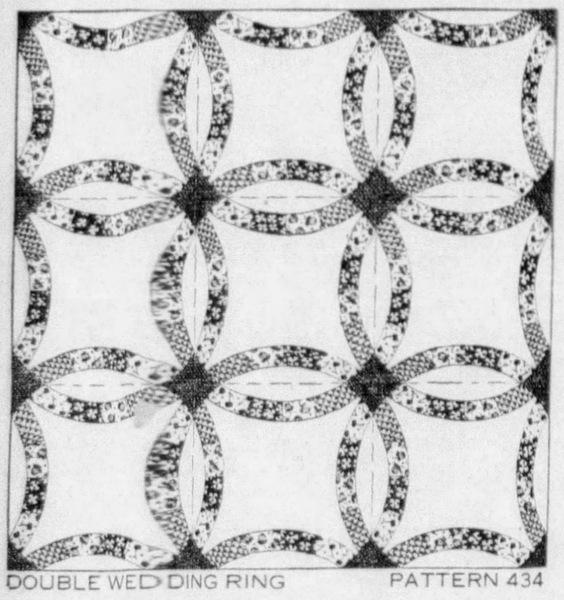
New novelty tunes and a waltz medley are the promised features of the Peyton Frivolities at 11:30.

Mother-In-Law Play Billed

"Kitchen Heroine," the lively story of a young wife who outwitted a prying mother-in-law who firmly believed no girl knew how to prepare her son's meals, will be dramatized over WCAE at 7:30 tonight.

Adapted from a Sun-Teleghaph short short story, the play will feature Robert Gill, Olivia Kelly and Pearl Hamel.

NEEDLEWORK DESIGNS



DOUBLE WEDDING RING PATTERN 434

The Double Wedding Ring is a pattern known to quiltmakers since the earliest days of this handicraft. In it the Colonial needlewoman pieced together the scraps of material she had been carefully saving. The result is the gay multi-colored interlacing ring. So, like this old-time quiltmaker, you can get out your patches and have an equally lovely quilt that is a pleasure to piece.

Pattern 434 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

'CHOLERA DAY' VOW KEPT

Special services in St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, South Side, today marked the annual observance of "Cholera Day" which has been a holy day at the parish for the last 85 years.

The observance is in fulfillment of a vow made by members of the parish in 1849 when an epidemic of cholera took many lives in that community.

During the plague the priests and parishioners of St. Michael's invoked the intercession of St. Roch and the Blessed Virgin and made a vow to keep a holy day each year. It is said that the congregation was spared from further effects of the epidemic, and again when the plague returned a few years later.

A solemn high mass was to be held with the very Rev. Regis Boyle, C. P., rector of St. Paul's Monastery, as celebrant. Rev. Winifred Gunther, C. P., pastor of the church, was to be deacon, and the Rev. Rupert Langenbacher, S. P. was to be sub-deacon.

Merchant, Consumer Food Code Parley Set

An open conference on the National Recovery Administration food distribution code will be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel Friday night. It will be attended by merchant and consumer organizations of the western section of the state.

The meeting was announced by C. H. Janssen, chairman of the National Food Code Authority, through the Pittsburgh NRA office.

PATTERN 1970

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

If your Mary-Ellen wears cotton the year round—make this frock of cotton. If not, we suggest challis for early fall or a smart jersey.

The great point, however, is to make it—and see that your young offspring does not miss anything so pretty.

We are strong for the contrasting yoke and sleeves even if you make it of a plain fabric, but the little frill on the collar could very well be omitted for a young person of tailored type.

Needless to say it makes a charming school frock—have you remarked the scalloped edge to the yoke and the scalloped closing?

Pattern 1970 is available in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16. Size 12 takes 2 yards 36-inch fabric and ¾-yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

And while you are writing, why not include an order for a fascinating book, crammed from cover to cover with stunning illustrations and captivating descriptions of new fashions, fabrics and other things that make a woman chic . . . . THE SUMMER ISSUE OF THE PATTERN BOOK. PRICE 15 CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, 25 CENTS.

Address orders to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

VETS OF '98 LAUNCH 'WAR TO DEATH' ON REDS

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—So far the press has hailed Tammany's new Sachem, James J. Dooling, as a young knight of sombre attenuations. So much so, the general belief is that the tiger's new roar is just a silken-voiced purr. Dooling at 41, blue eyed, somewhat dapper, is a contrast to the usual Fourteenth street blusterer.

Few outside Tammany political circles ever heard of him. A bachelor with no flair of the usual finery for the ladies, he has lived quietly with his younger sisters and attended to his law practice. He likes a flower in his lapel, the movies and reads a novel almost every night.

With no affectation of pugnacity, he is expected to build order out of his organization's disintegration and has gone about the herculean task quietly. Objectors see in him a personification of the tiger's claws being clipped. But insiders predict an amazing leader. He's a sort of Jim Cagney in real life.

One thing is certain he has none of the detachment the remote bleakness, of his predecessor John F. Curry. Dooling has warmth of cordiality without being effusive. They say he knows how to make friends. A very needed gift. A chastened Tammany needs them.

Incidentally, the ward heeler, that detestable legacy of another day, is almost in total eclipse. The ward heeler was a booming voiced cigar passer who farmed out his life to the business of graft. A pagan suckled in a creed outworn. New York had several thousands. He was a superb figure for Opper and other cartoonists.

Jay Price sends me a clipping of a Missouri editor's sum up of New York. He says Oscar Wilde's definition of a cynic perfectly describes it—"knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

The fact is none is so observing of values as the established New Yorker. He is the only person to scrutinize his dinner check and ride herd on the tip to the precise 10 per cent. Every theatrical ticket agent will tell you that paying $10 to see a $2 show is because people here on a fling will pay the exorbitant tariff. The silly New Yorker of the flush Wall street type might do it but they were in the minority and scarcely exist at all today.

If one searches off the beaten paths in Greenwich Village there are many evidences of what New York was like before splendor went to its head. Here and there squeezed in the jumble is an old date-brown cottage of long ago. I found one wandering with Floyd Gibbons the other evening featuring an oak postern gate from which once must have hung a brass lantern. There was a smaller flagged garden. A jackdaw in a wickerwork cage with an open door sat with a cheerful expression on a perch. Small countried flowers grew in a border. Ivy hung from the walls of the cottage. A peek through a half opened door revealed a picturesque dining room; a beamed roof with tool marks in the wood, a great red brick hearth, flagged floor, long refectory table, grandfather clock and mellowy dim family portraits. Naturally, I expected an antique shop but it wasn't. A corner policeman told us an elderly couple had lived there quietly since he came to the beat 12 years ago.

Broadway dance schools have suffered least of all businesses in the neighborhood during the slump. Ned Weyburn and Arthur Murray have several floors filled with flying, jigging feet from 10 a. m. until midnight. Oddly enough, those who are seeking professional careers are in the minority. The majority are the middle aged who feel the need of exercise and do not care for such outdoor recreations as golf and the like.

It seems to me the best professional dancers—such as James Barton, George White, Jack Donahue, Bill Robinson, Ray Bolger, Patsy Kelly, Doyle and Dixon and the like—came up from the sidewalk ruff-scuff. Many were "buskers" who jigged for pitched pennies and the sheer love of dancing. They had no special technique but grace, and a song in their heart.

* * *

Turning into Fifty-second street this evening I clumped smack into the biggest Great Dane I'd ever seen and almost did a standing jump out of my skin. I know now how the fellow felt passing grandma's who was rushed at by old Clay and yelled: "Call off your dog off or I'll knock off his head off."

Capt. Midnight Stages Daring Holdup on Road to Quebec

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

CHAPTER I.

In the governor's garden, below the towering walls of the Castle of St. Louis, the heart of Old Quebec, the moonlight made silver magic among the leaves of the tall maples, and the roses, the pinks and carnations that grew there were moonflowers, some pale, some dark, some a luminous color that has no name.

Moon magic—on gray stone wall and flagged walk, on roof-top and spire, moon magic in the dark and gleaming hair of the girl who leaned upon the wall and gazed out on the vast St. Lawrence, the river that was a hard silver shield on which the stars dropped little bombs of light which, bursting, made shattered gleams of brighter silver.

It was peaceful in the governor's garden. Yvonne Caron loved it—loved it particularly on such a night as this. There were soft, sighing voices in the trees and the moon-flowers drooped and nodded their fairy heads. To her quick and vivid fancy these were the voices of dead, gallant lovers who had trod the greensward there, lovers who lived again in the fair, sweet blooms of summer.

And from the dark caverns and recesses of shadow she felt the watchful eyes of the past. Quebec had been a fair, a mighty city in the days of Jean Talon, of Louis de Buade and the Marquis de Tracy; now it was ruled by rogues, weakened by treachery; the fleur-de-lis floated only feebly over its turreted battlements and the golden lilies seemed to fade, to metamorphose into the Cross of St. George.

"Yvonne! What, dreaming again! Have you forgotten there is a ball? Deaf to the music, blind to the lights—my faith, you are a strange girl!"

Dream Interrupted

Yvonne reluctantly abandoned her musings, straightened and turned smilingly to greet the slender, exquisitely dressed youth who hastened toward her. His wig was powdered and tied with a dark riband at the nape of his neck; his coat was silver, blue and the lace of his sleeves was as gossamer in the strange light; the jewels set in the hilt of his smallsword sparkled gayly.

"Yes, my brother," said Yvonne gently. "I was—deaf and blind to those sounds and sights. The minuets weary me and the lights annoy my eyes; while here, in the rush of the river, in the voice of the night wind is a symphony that other ears have heard and other ears will hear—an eternal symphony, and the light of moon and stars——"

"Ah, yes," agreed Paul Caron absently. "You were ever a dreamer, little sister. I have wondered often that you did not go there to spend your days." He gestured, with slender white hand, toward the gray convent of the Ursulines.

Yvonne shook her head, but she did not tell him that her fears for him, her concern for his wildness and reckless escapades, would keep her always near him. The two had been orphans since childhood.

"No matter," laughed Paul, looking, for a moment with appreciation rare in a brother, into her great blue-black eyes; her face that was a pale sweet oval, the red lips vague — so much like one of the mystic moon-flowers she loved, her face.

"You miss much of what goes on," said Paul. "There is a regular hubbub within the castle."

Daring Robbery

"More than usual? What, have they at last come to realize there is danger from the English? That the fortifications are strong only in their own fatuous thinking; that——"

"No! No! Not that. You exaggerate those things, Yvonne. The English will never take Quebec. It is Capt. Midnight, of course, and—"

"Again! What has our knight of the road been about now?"

"He has surely overstepped himself this time," said Paul. "On the St. Foye road, it was. Two of the intendant's gentlemen were returning to Quebec, carrying a considerable sum of money—"

"Blood - money, no doubt, which Bigot extorted shamelessly from the hungry peasants . . ."

"Please, Yvonne!" Paul laid a warning hand on hers. "Do be careful what you say about Bigot. You know his power here is absolute — greater than the governor's. Treason is a dangerous charge to have laid against one. At any rate, Capt. Midnight did rob them of every goldpiece they carried."

"I cannot regret it. Nor does it concern me greatly. Was that all that brought you here, Paul?"

"Little ingrate!" With teasing finger he traced the dark, gently curving sweep of her brow. "There is much more. Who do you think arrived in Quebec this evening on the Dauphin, that vessel that swings at anchor in the stream below?"

"How should I know?"

"Jean Pierre Martel!"

"Jean . . ."

Yvonne's sudden start, the swift widening of her eyes and the momentary loss of speech rewarded Paul, who loved to create sensations.

"Yes," he nodded vigorously. "He who is reputed the greatest lover and the worst scoundrel in France—Jean Pierre Martel.

DEMAND BRAND OF TRAITOR FOR FOES

Court Justice Edward S. Matthias, of Columbus, O.; Congressman Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, hero of the U. S. S. Merrimac.

TRAITORS ASSAILED

Resolutions presented by William L. Grayson, past commander of Georgia and chairman of the resolutions committee, call upon Spanish War veterans to carry on the patriotic services borne for so many years by veterans of the Civil War.

Extermination of the teachings of Communism also was demanded and a recommendation made that a system of registration and identification of aliens should be adopted by the federal government.

The resolutions, in part, follow:

"Fully recognizing the increased importance of education and training for citizenship, this organization urges that there be no curtailment of educational advantages for the youth of our country, and that no such sacrifices shall be required to be made in the name of economy. While we insist that public educational institutions shall be kept open to the youth of our land, we are just as insistent that they shall be closed to the teaching of Communism and other doctrines subversive of the Constitution of our country.

"We deplore and denounce the action of those groups or individuals which seek to instruct and induce the youth of our country to refuse to serve our nation in the event of war. The brand of traitor should be placed upon those who announce that no matter what the cause or the source of attack, they will in the future refuse to come to the defense of their own country.

"The maintenance of American political and economic standards requires not only greater restriction upon immigration, but also the exclusion and, where admission has been secured, the deportation of all aliens who advocate or encourage any movement for the violent overthrow of our government. To this end a thorough system of registration and identification of aliens should be adopted and maintained.

"We deplore the fact that there are men in public positions of trust and responsibility to whom great power and authority has been delegated, who, in the exercise of that power make questionable their loyalty and allegiance to our form of government.

"We have full faith and confidence that our present form of government is able and adequate to meet every emergency and solve every problem. The powers of each branch of the government, executive, legislative and judicial should be preserved and kept inviolable with each performing its own functions and neither branch usurping or encroaching upon the functions of the other."

DEFINNE AMERICANISM

The resolutions were adopted with the entire assemblage of delegates rising to repeat aloud the organization's declaration of Americanism:

"Americanism is an unfailing love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessing of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

Rear Admiral Hobson, in his address, stressed the necessity of national defense and bitterly denounced those persons with leanings towards Cummunism, Pacism or Nazism. He said:

"The penalties of unpreparedness have fallen heavily upon us in all our country's wars since the birth of our nation. Penalties that cost heavily in blood and health and in treasure; penalties that exceeded many times over the cost of even partial preparedness."

Admiral Hobson also appealed to the assembled delegates to aid in the securement of uniform state narcotic control laws.

Former Senator Means, adding his voice in the denunciation of radicals, said:

"In these present days of confusion, the nation needs every one of you . . . We must fight any elements who come in to try to break down our form of government. These elements try to impose some foreign system as being better than ours.

"Those who don't like our form of government should get out."

The former Senator bitterly denounced the National Economy Act and defeat of the veterans' bonus bill. Congress, he said he believed, recognized the fact that the veterans had a good case, but propaganda brought to bear on them resulted in confusion and misunderstanding. The public, he declared, was also misled and forgot its promise to the veterans.

Taking issue with a remark credited to President Roosevelt that no man who wore a uniform for a year or two is in "a special class," the former Senator said:

"I want to tell you I disagree with the man who says that because a man wore a uniform for a year or two he is not in a special class."

Supreme Court Justice Edward S. Matthias, of Columbus, O., attacked congressmen who have merely "gone along with the administration in Washington." He said:

"Most of our congressmen have scuttled their responsibilities and have handed them over to the Executive in Washington, especially in connection with the veterans' pension activities."

VETERANS VISIT LANDMARKS

Spanish War veterans who crowded South Park for their field day yesterday found the Old Stone Manse, dating back to days before the Whisky Rebellion, historically correct — even their hostesses garbed in beautiful, billowing Colonial gowns.

Four of the ladies, Mrs. Frank J. Boyle, Miss Rose Danaher, Mrs. E. Jette Maier and Mrs. W. P. Gallaher, acted as guides in the old house at the special request of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

Their's was the duty of showing the vets a dining table of Eighteenth Century vintage at which George Washington was feasted as the guest of Gen. Alexander Negley. Other valuable antiques, rich in historical lore, were shown.

But if the ladies inside had been asked to a dinner in Washington's honor they would have been perfectly at home. Their wigs of silvery white were powdered. Their gowns of satin and lace were cut in the most stylish of Colonial modes. Even to the beauty marks, a tiny black heart or star on a cheek, their costumes were complete.

The Old Stone Manse, as it is known now, was originally the Miller homestead, dating back to 1774. It was to this house that John Neville, while enforcement officer during the "Whisky Rebellion," went to serve a warrant on the son of the then owner, Oliver Miller. Another landmark pointed out by the ladies is Aggers Cottage, now used for week-end outings by Girl Scouts.

PANTS PATCHED, BUT TRUE BLUE

Louis Trayser, a Spanish-American war veteran, who served with Company A, Fourth Wisconsin Regiment, attending the thirty-sixth national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans here today, claims that he owns and wears one of the few original full uniforms worn by the boys of '98.

And by way of proving it, he carries "the key to the situation," a huge wooden one, wound around with colored ribbons.

His pants are patched, worn out by the wear of more than three decades since he was mustered out, but he is prouder of them than a young man with his first "long ones."

In addition to the complete uniform, Trayser says, he has one of the few remaining overcoats and mess kits. The uniform, by the way, is a dress outfit—all blue.

Widow Gets Nothing In $261,896 Will

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The estate of Edward Romine, Wheeling businessman, who died last December, is appraised at $261,896.

The will, dated four days before Romine's death, left the entire estate to Emma Row Arbenz and makes no mention of the widow. Emma Arbenz is the wife of a cousin of Romine's widow. Relatives said they will contest the will, asserting Romine was not in his right mind when it was made.

VET SEES CITY'S DOOM BY AIR IN NEXT WAR

Uncle Sam's 'Idea Man' Paints Grim Picture Of Bombs, Gas

A grim picture of the horrors of war with enemy airplanes raining thousands of death-dealing "mosquito" bombs on Pittsburgh's industrial plants, laying a devastating pall of poison gas over the city and scurrying, like frightened ants, the frenzied population, was brought home today by Uncle Sam's "idea man," John W. Currell, one-time soldier, sailor and Marine and Spanish War veteran.

It was this same mild-appearing individual who, for love of his country and a passing glory, invented the aerial bomb in 1908. Today he has modernized this cumbersome and weighty instrument of death and has brought forth a bomb weighing only two pounds which has practically the same deadliness. An airplane, carrying several hundred of these deadly little missiles he says, could discharge them at the rate of 200 or more a minute—like a farmer sowing seed—and the resultant damage would be several hundred times greater.

STUDIES PITTSBURGH

Mr. Currell has made a careful study of the Pittsburgh area during his visit to the Spanish War Veterans' reunion here the past four days. He declares:

"Pittsburgh is within two hours' flight from the Atlantic Coast and a city an enemy would attack, due to the steel, chemical and other industries vital to our nation engaged in war.

"Enemy air raiders could easily locate the city day or night because of its location at the junction of two rivers; also due to smoke in the daytime and lights at night from the steel mills surrounding the city.

"To destroy the city, planes would scatter the new lightweight bombs by the thousands. The bombs are of two types—the demolition, or explosive type which would tear and rend asunder anything hit and the incendiary bomb, which would spread fire and ruin."

PICTURE OF HORROR

The picture of horror Mr. Currell paints could be obliterated, he says, by the advancement and promotion of the nation's air corps.

IN CUBA, PHILIPPINES

A bachelor at the age of 57, Mr. Currell's life has been an unusual one. Enlisting in the 5th Ohio Infantry in 1898, he served first in Cuba, then re-enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1900 for service in the Philippines. After serving five years with the Marines, he entered the naval service, graduating in 1909 as a senior gunner.

He left the service then and applied himself to civilian life. At present he is employed as a mechanic in Washington, but maintains his membership in the E. H. Liscum Camp of Spanish-American War Veterans in Oakland, Cal., from which group he comes to Pittsburgh as a delegate to the reunion.

At the present time, Mr. Currell revealed, he is working another newer and still more effective type of aerial bomb — one that will carry its deadly potion of gas as well as spread destruction from the explosion.

3 Wear Congressional Honor Medal

Citations Tell Stories Of Deeds That Won Decorations

Three real war heroes—recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor—are among the visiting veterans in Pittsburgh this week for the Thirty-sixth National Encampment of United Spanish-American War Veterans.

Two are Spanish War men and the other distinguished himself in the World War. They are attending sessions of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor, all of whom received either the Congressional Medal or the Distinguished Service Cross.

The war heroes, only ones among the thousands of veterans in the city to wear the coveted Congressional medal are:

Private Sterling Morelock, World War; Sergt. Thomas J. Graves, Cuban campaign, and A. J. Carson, Philippine insurrection. Their citations tell the stories.

TRAPPED BY FOE

Private Morelock was serving with Company M, 28th Infantry, At Exermount, France, the company found itself trapped by the Germans. Machine-gun fire swept the ranks from every side. There was no retreat. The company held its ground, but the ranks thinned fast from the devastating fire. Bravely they charged the German nests—more than a score of them. When the smoke of battle cleared every German was wiped out. Only Private Morelock and his lieutenant, Charles B. Lawton, were alive. Private Morelock went to the hospital, where he remained 11 years. His hip, shot away, had been replaced bit by bit through the wonders of modern surgery and today he is able to get around with a limp.

RESCUES HIS COLONEL

Sergt. Graves, back in 1898, was just a recruit with Company C, 17th United States Infantry in Cuba. At El Caney, on July 1, the company was entrenched in the line when two officers started out to reconnoiter. The Spaniards opened fire. Both officers fell. One was able to crawl back to safety, but Col. Haskell, the commanding officer, lay in full view of his troops and directly in line of fire. Graves, "scared to death," he says, heard his sergeant bawl out an order:

"Someone go out there and get the colonel."

Graves says:

"He was looking at me and I thought it was me he meant, so I just hopped to it."

He brought the wounded officer through a veritable hail of bullets without injury to himself and for this act was promoted to the rank of sergeant and cited for decoration.

WON FIVE-DAY FIGHT

Sergt. Carson, a veteran of the 43d U. S. Volunteer Infantry, received his decoration for bravery in the Philippines. A corporal at the time, he was with his company near Catubig on the Island of Samoa when they were surrounded and out numbered by a band of native Tagalos and Moros. It was on April 15, 1900.

All day long they fought the insurrectionists. All night long they battled. On the morning of the second day, Corp. Carson's sergeant, in command of the detachment, fell mortally wounded. Carson, next in rank, took command. He had 31 men left.

Council also ordered a complete inquiry into reports of lack of co-operation among members of the Wilmerding force, except Chief S. M. Holden.

Pickpocket Takes $19 From Veteran

E. W. Martin, of St. Louis, a United Spanish War Veteran, was robbed of his wallet containing $19 and valuable papers while en route to Veterans' outing and field day celebration at South Park late yesterday, according to police. Martin told police he boarded a bus downtown and when he reached the park he discovered a pickpocket had stolen his wallet.

3 Buddies of '98 Seek 'Lost' Man of Quartet

O. L. CRAWFORD — THOMAS J. GRAVES — EDWARD M'LISTER

When Company C, 17th U. S. Infantry, disbanded 36 years ago, four men said their farewells and went their separate ways back to civilian life.

Today, in Pittsburgh, three of these same four "buddies" met for the first time. They're looking for the fourth—last heard of in Carnegie.

The "lost" man is John A. Boyd.

The buddies reunited at this year's encampment are O. L. Crawford, of DeVista place, Pittsburgh; Thomas J. Graves, of Cambridge City, Ind., and Edward McLister, of Mingo Junction.

Graves, who wears the congressional medal of honor, brought about the reunion. He looked up his buddies of the Cuban campaign the minute he arrived in the city last Sunday. He explained:

"I knew Crawford lived here—so I just hunted around till I found him. But, shucks—I wish we could find Boyd before the reunion busts up."

Tears Can't Erase Past So Try and Forget

There are a few letters I receive which can't be published. They have a too intimate setting. They tell tales out of school. Yet no doubt these happenings are tragedies.

They are events which have cast their shadow behind, and against all laws of the universe, also at the same time cast their shadow before. Regret is a bitter thing. Retribution, which sets in too soon, is a rancor to the mind, a wormwood to the soul.

Miss Brunot

One such late comes from Faithful. She writes from a small town in Pennsylvania, a place I visited as a child. One which brings back happy memories to me. One of a circus, when I fell through a reserved seat. . . . Served me right for skating in such places! Another of my first lessons in ice skating and with one of my very first beaux. He was as scared as I, no doubt.

FORGET!

To Faithful I say, there is but one thing to do. Forget. What is done cannot be remedied. . . . All the tears in the world can only blot, and not efface, the page. . . . Conscience stirs a little less with the years. . . . There are people all around you who have done as bad things as you have done. . . . Neighbors. . . . Great people and small ones. None of us are ever alone in wrong doing. . . . It is the way of MAN.

There is one thing we must always remember, though, and that is a mind that keeps groveling in the sadnesses of the past is a diseased one. . . . To erase anything we must go deeper than the surface.

ONLY CATS LICK UP SPILT MILK!

HAVE WILL OF OWN

Here is a very young girl passing through a stage of being infatuated with her best girl friend. She even goes so far as to be jealous of her. She wants all the other girls once all her thoughts, all her whims and fancies. And the other girl realizing her hold upon the writer, exerts a masterful influence.

She must have her finger in every pie. She is a wee bit of the real VAMPIRE.

She isn't going to lose the power she has gained. . . .

And to PUZZLED let me suggest that she set about to make many new contacts. Never allow one of your own sex to be all in all to you. . . . Many lives are ruined by letting such people sway every act. . . . So often one girl rules another mentally, and it weakens your will power.

You are only 16 and are passing through an imaginative stage, and you must not allow any morbid influences to root themselves within you. . . . Cultivate wholesome minded boys. . . . Take outdoor exercise. . . . Traipse about and see what is going on. . . . Also read books in which there is humor and clean romances.

And if just now this girl friend is going through one of her POUTS let it remain that way. . . . Dont make any advances toward her. . . . And if she comes back to you, no longer will she be the MYSTERY.

In small towns such as you live in, there is too much idle time. . . . We garner in much that isn't worth its salt. . . . Life is too short to live it inanely. . . . Don't let any one influence spoil your whole life, sister.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Of a Wife Heart

Reveal Hunt for Criminals

"Why was Rod holding his hand over your mouth?" I asked Junior, almost perfunctorily, for I was so bewildered at this tale of the two small boys and their post-midnight excursion that I felt equal to mechanical queries only.

"It was this way," Roderick struck in briskly, patently eager to exculpate himself from a possible charge of eavesdropping. "I don't know what woke me up—I don't think it was the light going on, for my head was covered up so I couldn't see it very well— and the first thing I heard was Hank and Bill talking.

"I knew they hadn't seen us when they come—came in, and I was afraid they'd be mad if they found out we'd been there—they'd think we hid so as to listen to 'em— you know how big boys are," he interpolated, with an air of sapience that nearly convulsed me.

CLUE TO CRIMINALS

"So," he went on, "I put my hand over Jun's mouth so he wouldn't yell, and then I punched him to wake him up, for I didn't know what second we might have to beat it out of there. That was what I planned—to sneak out the second we got a good chance."

"And then," Junior here took up the saga, "they said somepin' that made us want to stay right there and listen all we could. I'll bet you would, too, if you had been in our place."

"Tell me the reason you thought you ought to stay," I asked gently.

"Why, Hank and Bill said they thought they had a line on the men that tried to kill dad, and they were going to follow it up if it took 'em clear to China. That's what they said. And I thought if Bill and Hank felt that way, and they're only his nephews, why I'm his son, and Rod's more than just a nephew, he's sort of dad's son, too, and we thought we ought to be finding out about things, too."

"I understand just how you felt, and I am not blaming you for listening. You could not help that under the circumstances, and you didn't intend to eavesdrop; it was really forced upon you. Go on with your story."

"Well!" Junior drew a long breath. "We couldn't understand all they were talking about—it seems they'd overheard some talking that hadn't meant anything to 'em at the time; they thought it was somebody giving orders about his laundry. But after those men tried to kill dad, then they remembered what they'd heard, and Hank said they put two and two together and made five, which I guess was just their way of joking."

"It's an expression of theirs," I explained as Junior halted.

'PLAYING POSSUM'

"Yes, I guess so," he assented perfunctorily. "Anyway, we heard them planning to get up just before daylight, take Jim's wheel and another one and go off to the place where the shots came from, where they said they were pretty sure of getting onto sumepin'.

They set the alarm clock after that and went to bed. They put out the light, but it was a long time after that before we dared do more than poke out heads out from under those covers."

"I'll say it was," Roderick struck in. "We heard 'em snoring, both of 'em, before we dared make a sound. Then we took off the covers and hunched offen that couch an inch at a time. Then we beat it upstairs to the room offen the nursery, slipped into bed and waited until we were sure everybody was asleep before we began to talk."

"But, Junior, Roderick," I said with sudden suspicion, "I looked in on you and saw you asleep."

A slow, brick-red flush covered each small boy's face and neck.

"Sorry, Mums," Junior said, "but we weren't asleep at all when you came in. We were playing 'possum. We never thought we could fool you, but we did."

BLACK ON THE SILVER STANDARD

By PRUNELLA WOOD

LONG-SLEEVED dinner gowns will be an important fall style and many of the models just appearing go in for lavish touches of metal, in fabric or hardware applications. There are very extravagant looking black velvet or crepe models which one can truly call outlines so flattering and individual they seem to be, and there is quite a revival of metal paillettes, our nail heads on crepe models of dark, jewel shades.

* * *

AMERICAN WOMEN dearly love the lame motif in their dress-up clothes, and one can always count on designers giving them plenty when the approach of cool weather brings them an opportunity. One sound reason for the popularity is that a formal appearance can be got in a jiffy when the dress one slips on is decorative enough to make extra accessories an unnecessary gesture.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

The back-to-front little jacket above is the new touch to a daringly low-cut black crepe frock. It is silver tissue and very pert and amusing. The standing model, right, wears a long-sleeved dinner gown of black crepe, inserted with broad bands of silver tissue. Note the bulky tops so independent of the pencil line skirt.

Black velvet, cut with a train and a nicely molded skirt make the gown above. The sailor collar is silver tissue, also the bishop cuffs.

How to 'Glorify' Spinach for Kids

By PRUDENCE PENNY

With school days approaching, it is important to think about planning wholesome and healthful menus to keep young bodies and minds strong and alert for the sledding and skating days ahead.

Today's first prize winner might well top the list of desirable foods for growing children. According to Popeye, the comic-strip character and idol of small boys, as well as many less renowned but perhaps more creditable authorities, spinach is a prime requisite in any diet which is destined to promote pep, vim and vigor in youngsters.

May I remind you that no recipes sent in to Prudence Penny can be returned. Write on only one side of the paper, be sure to have your name and address at the top of each sheet, and send in as many as you like. Here's luck to you. Today's prize winners are:

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. G. W. MILLER
175 Grasmere street.
FILLED SPINACH RING

Wash well, ½ peck of spinach. Cook until tender, adding 1 teaspoon salt. After draining add 1 tablespoon butter and a little pepper. Arrange ring fashion in a low casserole or plate. In center placed stuffed hard cooked eggs.

Six hard cooked eggs.
One-quarter pound bacon.
One-half green pepper, cut very fine.
One small onion chopped fine.
Five tablespoons fine bread crumbs.

Cut bacon in 12 two-inch pieces, cutting remainder in small pieces, and fry until crisp. Remove bacon bits and fry onion and green pepper in fat until brown; then add fried bacon bits and crumbs. Remove yolks from eggs.

Cut eggs lengthwise and remove yolks from eggs. Mash and mix yolks with bacon mixture. Fill centers of whites and place one of the two-inch pieces of bacon on top of each half. Bake in hot oven until bacon is done. Serve with white sauce.

One cup milk.
One tablespoon flour.
One tablespoon butter.

Cook until thick, melt butter, add flour and milk and cook until thickened. Season to taste.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. SARA B. HIGBEE,
Box 66, Finleyville.
COFFEE-DATE-NUT BREAD

Three cups flour.
One-third cup shortening.
Two cups sugar.
One-half cup nut meats.
One and three-fourths cup strong hot coffee.
One package dates, cut fine.
Two eggs.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Two teaspoons soda.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.

Cream butter and sugar and add beaten eggs. Save one-half cup of flour for dredging the nuts and dates and sift the remaining flour and dry ingredients together (except soda). Add soda to the boiling coffee, and add alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Fold in the floured nuts and dates and add vanilla. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees F. Bake in loaf pans of large baking powder cans, well oiled. Will keep well.

MRS. GOLDIE HANTMAN,
1332 Woodlawn ave., Wilkinsburg.
STUFFED CUCUMBERS

Cut four cucumbers in half lengthwise. Remove seeds with a spoon. Lay cucumbers in vinegar overnight, then wipe dry and fill with the following mixture:

One cup pecans.
Six tablespoons mashed potatoes.
One well-beaten egg.
One teaspoon salt.
Two tablespoons chopped parsley.
Dash white pepper.
Dash nutmeg.
Two tablespoons melted butter.

Bake in a buttered dish until tender. Serve hot with one cup white sauce mixed with dash of powdered cloves, one well-beaten egg, salt and pepper to taste.

MRS. LEONA COCHENOUR,
Third street, West Newton.
UNCOOKED CHOCOLATE COVERED PEPPERMINTS

Two tablespoons gelatine.
One-half cup cold water.
Six cups confectioners sugar.
One-half teaspoon wintergreen extract.
One-fourth teaspoon peppermint extract.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Red and green coloring.

Pour cold water in bowl, and sprinkle gelatine on top of water. Place bowl over boiling water, and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add sugar and salt and mix together until smooth. Divide into three parts, color one part red and flavor with wintergreen extract, color the other part green and flavor with peppermint extract, the remaining one-third flavor with peppermint extract. Mix coloring and flavoring into candy very thoroughly, and allow to stand for one hour, cover tightly with wax paper. Roll into long strips and cut into thin slices, making mints. Dip into melted chocolate which is not too hot. May be dipped in a sweet or bitter sweet chocolate.

MRS. H. C. GRAHAM,
444 Ruxton street, Mt. Washington.
TEA ROOM ROLLS

One cup shortening.
One cup sugar.
One cake yeast.
One and one-half tablespoons salt.
Two eggs.
One cup mashed Potatoes.
Two pints lukewarm water and milk.
Four quarts flour.

Scald milk and add shortening, eggs, mashed potatoes and sugar. Dissolve cake of yeast in one-half cup lukewarm water. To yeast add one tablespoon sugar and enough flour to make a thin batter. Add this rise for one-half hour. When scalded milk is cooled, add yeast, sponge and two quarts flour. Let this rise over night. In the morning add remaining two quarts flour. Let rise twice in bulk. Make into rolls. Let them rise and bake 10 minutes in moderate oven. Use one-half the amount for family use.

HULDA BERGMANN,
Grant Building.
PEANUT BRITTLE PINEAPPLE DELIGHT

One cup whipping cream.
One cup drained, crushed pineapple.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
Two-thirds cup crushed peanut brittle.
Eight marshmallows, cut into eighths.
One-half cup syrup from pineapple.

Whip cream until thick, but not stiff, then fold in the remaining ingredients. The peanut brittle may be either put through a food chopper or rolled with a rolling pin. Freeze for some hour, then reduce the cold and freeze until ready to serve. Stirring during the process of freezing is not necessary. Serves ten.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Hostess Pays

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My girl friend was asked to dispose of two dance tickets (each admitting a couple). We used one ticket and the other ticket was used by her sister and her boy friend. I wanted to pay for our ticket but she said that because she asked me to go it was her place to pay for it. Was she right?

MALE READER.

Yes, the young lady was right. There are many ways, of course, for you to show her, by your gestures of generous hospitality, that you wish to "return" her kindness.

Simple Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to have an outdoor afternoon wedding and reception not quite seven months after the death of the bride's father?

The bride's mother will have just moved to a small four-room apartment. Would it be permissible to hold the wedding in her aunt's garden or home according to the weather? D.

Since the bride's father has been dead such a very short time, the bride and her mother should plan the simplest of weddings, either the ceremony performed in church with only the close relatives and a few close friends present, or the ceremony in the apartment of the bride.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When doing rough housework, don't fail to wear rubber or cotton gloves. Grime destroys the lovely skin, as it wrecks fine fabrics. Avoid harsh soaps, dry hands thoroughly.

The girl with large ankles should wear low-heeled shoes. There are lovely ones now and they are as smart as mustard. Almost like childrens' shoes, some of them, and the front-rank fashionables are keen about 'em. With high heels and narrow shoes ankles appear larger. If the excess measurement is due to fat, roll it away by picking up the flesh in folds, crushing the adipoise tissue between thumb and finger.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY
and
HOW TO WIN

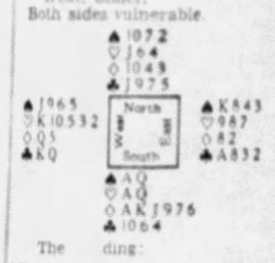
By Josephine Culbertson

Breaking the Law

Just as a lawyer, at least according to common belief, knows how to break the law of the land, a good bridge player knows how, on rare occasions, to break the law, or rather the letter of the law, of the system he professes to play, and, unlike the lawyer, he need have no conscientious scruples about using his knowledge. Though the Approach principle is, always has been, and always will be the backbone of any good bidding system, and a suit-bid, even though the suit is shaded and only four cards in length, should almost invariably be preferred to an Opening call of any number of notrump, I must admit that I approve of South's unnatural Opening bid on today's hand. Holding a strong six-card suit, the South player opened the bidding with two notrump, instead of one of that suit. This bid, coupled with great faith on the part of South's partner, enabled the North and South pair to get to a game. South was able to develop several extra tricks in the play, and as a result he and his partner received an absolute top-score on the hand, which was played in a recent American Whist League National Championship Tournament at Chicago.

Mrs. Culbertson

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	2 N T (1)
Pass	3 N T (2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—As mentioned above, this bid is in direct contradiction to sound bidding principles. However, the fact that the hand was played in a tournament with match point scoring impressed upon South the advantages of a final notrump contract rather than one in a minor suit. South reasoned that if his partner had a weak hand and passed the Opening bid, even though no game were lost, a part-score in notrump would be far more lucrative than a part-score in diamonds. With any sort of diamond support in Dummy six diamond tricks and two Aces were a certainty, and if the Opening lead were in either spades or hearts, the ninth trick would be assured and a game contract in notrump automatically fulfilled. Obviously, the club suit presented some slight dangers, but South's holding of three cards in it was somewhat reassuring.

2—Although South's unnatural bid of two notrump can be alibied by legitimate and logical reasoning, I cannot say the same for North's Raise. The North player actually confessed to me later that he bid three notrump quickly, before his better sense could get hold of him and make him change his mind. His only defense was that he knew South to be a very sound and conservative player, who bid two notrump very rarely, and then only with a powerful hand.

Against the three-notrump contract West led a low heart. The Declarer won the trick with the Queen, and now found that the diamond suit was evenly divided. After playing three rounds of diamonds, on the third of which East discarded one of his hearts, South decided to experiment. He led a low club from his hand up to Dummy's four-card suit and West, of course, won the trick with the Queen.

The West player, having noticed the complete weakness of the Dummy, decided to play to defeat the contract instead of attempting to restrict the Declarer to as few overtricks as possible. West should have known that to defeat the contract was a hopeless task because of the Declarer's six good diamonds, but, disregarding this clue, he stubbornly shifted to the nine of spades. Dummy played low, and East refused to play his King, so South won with the Queen. South now ran his three remaining diamonds and poor East had difficulties in discarding. Seemingly faced with the necessity of guarding the spade King, of keeping a heart to lead, case West held the Ace, East eventually, on the last diamond lead blanked down to the singleton Ace of clubs. At this point South, who had watched the discards very closely, led a low club and lo and behold, the Ace and King dropped together. South of course won the last three tricks with his two major suit Aces and the club Ten. He accordingly made five notrump for a plus-score of 770 and top-score on the board.

To Chase Ants.

In eradicating house ants spread gasoline, kerosene or disulphid of carbon about the house. Since all of them are inflammable, rigid precautions must be taken to see that no fire is present. Keeping food supplies in closed metal containers also helps to drive them out.

Amusing Swimming Contests Planned at Longue Vue Club

Some amusing contests have been arranged for the Longue Vue Club swimming events for members and their families only on September 8. The races and contests will start at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and there will be a buffet luncheon from noon until 2, and after the events a dinner dance, and at 11 o'clock that night a surprise swimming event is scheduled.

For the children, besides the regulation diving and swimming events, there will be a balloon race, a brick recover race, an old clothes race, a pick-a-back race, and a spoon race, in which the contestants must carry a spoon in their mouths, with a peanut in each spoon, while swimming the length of the pool. There will also be a towel race and several tandem races, a gay nineties stunt, and a "swimming in the rain" race, meaning that the swimmers must use a side stroke and carry an open umbrella out of the water.

Miss DeVenny, Ted Amann To Wed

Today the parents of a Pittsburgh girl are announcing her engagement to an Erie boy, who was a member of the varsity football squad in 1932 at Duquesne University.

She is Miss Helen DeVenny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John DeVenny, of Brighton road, North Side, and she has chosen October 16 as the date for her marriage to Ted Amann, of Erie, in St. Francis Xavier's Church.

Miss DeVenny is a graduate of Miss Byran's School of Dramatic Art, Pittsburgh, and at one time appeared with a Pittsburgh stock company. Her fiance is a graduate of Duquesne University.

Layette Club To Hold Party

The Margaret E. Caven Layette Club will have a luncheon and card party at the Rosenbaum Home Arts Studio on Tuesday, September 4, at 12:30 o'clock. Under the general chairmanship of Mrs. Elizabeth Sexauer, worthy high priestess of Damascus Shrine, White Shrine of Jerusalem, worthy high priestesses of other shrines will serve as the committee in charge.

The club, which makes layettes for needy prospective mothers, made and gave out more than 300 last year. The proceeds of its affair on the fourth will be used for this work.

Elizabeth Chapman Weds Roy E. Roundtree

At an evening ceremony on the terrace of her mother's home Monday, Miss Elizabeth B. Chapman, daughter of Mrs. George B. Chapman, of Briar Cliff road, Ben Avon Heights, became the bride of Lieut. Roy E. Roundtree. Officiating at 7:30 o'clock was the Rev. R. Heber McIlwaine, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Samuel W. Gibb, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Gibb was also here for the ceremony. The bride's gown was of pale blue lace with which she wore a bridal corsage, and she was unattended. Lieut. Richard E. O'Conner was best man.

After an eastern wedding trip Lieut. and Mrs. Roundtree will be at home at Fort Hunt, Va., where the bridegroom is stationed.

Pittsburghers At Atlantic City

A number of Pittsburghers are vacationing at Chalfonte-Haddon Hall, Atlantic City. Among them are Mrs. George L. Farrell, of South Highland avenue; Miss M. Elinor Smith, Lafayette avenue; Miss Barbara Ann Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Scott, South Euclid avenue; Mrs. I. O. Briggs and Miss Monica Briggs, Holden street, and Mrs. C. M. McGary and Miss Anna McGary, of Wayne road.

Also there are Miss Martha Anne Glynn, Wayne avenue; Mrs. R. C. McAteer, Plainfield street; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Baldersons, Pennfield Court, and Miss Elizabeth Hirsch, Margaretta street.

Bundle Bridge Parties to Be Decreased

Attendance at the Council of Jewish Women's bundle bridge party at the Hotel Schenley on September 6 will not be limited to Council members. Heretofore Council has had several bundle parties each year, but now there are to be but two, of which this is the first.

If Council's Service Shop shelves are to be refilled each of the two bundle parties will, of necessity, be large affairs, as their bundles of admission constitute Service Shop's stock. The Shop, which has been closed during August, will reopen the day after the bundle party.

J. R. Major, Family, Visit Cleveland

J. R. Major and his family, of Bayard street, were guests during the past week end of Hugh Bauerlein at the Hotel Westlake, Lake Erie, Cleveland, O.

Hugo Bezdek, of State College, Pa., and J. T. Weinzierl, New Kensington, are also registered at the Westlake.

Miss McGregor On Air Tomorrow

Miss Lois McGregor, director of day camps for the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies, is to be the speaker during the radio period of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women tomorrow at 3:45 over KDKA. She will discuss day camping as it has been sponsored by the Social Agencies Federation.

Circle Plans To Hold Show

Next Wednesday the Czecho-Slovak Junior Circle will present a puppet show in the Lower Theatre at the International Institute. This program is one in the series of open house evenings which have been conducted during the summer. The Junior Circle and the Craft Club will act as hosts and hostesses for the evening.

The 14 puppets to be used in the show have been imported from Prague. The play, "The Enchanted Princess," is based on an old Czecho-Slovak legend. There will be no admission charge and the general public is invited to attend.

Miss Millie Mamatel is taking an important part in the production. She represents the Czecho-Slovakian group in the House Council, which is the organization responsible for planning the summer programs. Miss Trnar, Lee represents the Craft Club in the council.

Catholic Group Will Hold Party

A picnic supper with dancing, cards and star-gazing has been arranged for Tuesday by Court Chartiers, Catholic Daughters of America, at Riverview Park. The court is calling the affair a "star party" and it is under the general chairmanship of Mrs. Rose M. Kusebauch.

Miss Margaret Callahan, chairman of the court's bowling league, announces that there are to be three divisions this coming winter, one in Sheraden, the second in Crafton and the third in McDonald, which will compete at the close of the season.

A choral society is to be organized in Court Chartiers and will be under the direction of Miss Josephine McCleaf, of the Duquesne University music school.

Anna M. Rose Engaged to Minister

Mrs. Ethel S. Rose, of North Bryant street, Bellevue, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Anna Margaret Rose, to the Rev. Harry Vernon Porter, pastor of the Westminster Church, Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Porter, of Meade avenue, Bellevue.

Miss Rose attended Lake Erie College, Painesville, O., and the Rev. Porter attended Penn State and Princeton Seminary and received his Ph. M. at Princeton.

Bedford Springs Visitors From Here

Recent Pittsburgh arrivals at the Bedford Springs Hotel, Bedford Springs, were Mrs. C. M. Knorr, Mrs. Joseph Benz, Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Marshall, Miss E. J. Lyons, Miss Julia E. Branson, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Weinfeld, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Schaffer, Miss Louise Schaffer, H. B. Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lowry.

Mrs. H. S. Hopkins Visits North East

Mrs. H. S. Hopkins, who will do publicity for the Crafton Woman's Club this season, has returned from North East, where she and Mr. Hopkins spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Turney. Mrs. Turney is second vice president of the Crafton club.

Students' Mothers Meet

MRS. CHARLES M. BRIGGS

To fit the need for an informal organization of parents of girls who are students at the University of Pittsburgh, the University Parents' Council has been formed. Twenty members were called together for a meeting at Heinz House on the campus and Mrs. Mrs. William Steinbeck, of Hermitage street, was chosen president of the council; Mrs. J. B. Smith, vice president, and Mrs. William E. Swank, secretary.

The faculty advisers on the executive committee are Miss Thyra W. Amos, dean of women; Miss Helen P. Bush, assistant to Miss Amos, and Miss Theresa Kahl, of the English department. Six meetings will be held between October and April at Heinz House and the activities will center around the University and its needs, programs featuring with interesting personalities at the University. Chancellor John G. Bowman will be invited to address the first meeting in October. All meetings will be held in the Cathedral of Learning.

Anne Malone Is Bride of Doctor

Just to prove that summer has nearly slipped away a bride of Tuesday wore a velvet gown at her wedding instead of the ivory satin of previous August brides.

The bride was Miss Anne Malone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Malone, of Locust place, Sewickley, and she married Dr. Paul G. Cooper, of Bellevue, son of Mrs. Lucy Cooper, of Patton, Pa., in St. James Roman Catholic Church, Sewickley, at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The bride wore medium blue velvet with a matching velvet hat and carried gardenias. Her sister, Miss Eleanor Malone, was maid of honor and wore blue crepe with a matching velvet hat and carried tea roses. Dr. Lee Cooper, of Patton, was his brother's best man. There was a breakfast in the Shannopin Country Club, after which Dr. Cooper and his bride left for New England and will be at home in Lincoln avenue, Bellevue, when they return.

Mrs. Cooper is a graduate of Beaver Hill, Greensburg, and Dr. Cooper was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh.

'Nightie' Dress Newest in Modes

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—It's hard to tell these days, whether a girl is dressed for the boudoir or the dance floor.

The "nightgown dress" is one of the newest wrinkles of fall fashions, and no doubt will be seen at our best stay-up-late places this winter.

Its chief distinguishing characteristic is its simplicity and its extreme high-waisted line.

The nightgown dress may be of practically any material, from satin to metal-shot silk, but the softer fabrics are the more effective. It is belted under the bust, and the skirt hangs straight and unadorned to the floor.

It accents the youthful, rounded bust line, and often has the popular off-the-shoulder neckline.

On the other hand, real nightgowns have acquired all the elegance of evening dresses of late.

They are carefully fitted and of glamorous fabrics, and the newest ones desert the old color standbys of tearose and baby blue.

Nightgowns nowadays may be any color from stratosphere purple to poison green.

Pitt Sorority To Sponsor Dance

The alumnae of Nu chapter of Alpha Epsilon Phi, social sorority at Pitt, are sponsoring an open dance at the Pines on the Perrysville highway tomorrow.

The dance is being given to raise funds for the A. E. Phi scholarship, a new project undertaken last spring by Alpha Epsilon Phi. The scholarship is to be awarded yearly to some deserving Jewish student on the Pitt campus who has attained high scholastic records and is in financial need.

All the proceeds from the dance will be used to increase the scholarship fund.

Mrs. William Goldhammer, general chairman, and Miss Rena Goldhammer, co-chairman, have completed all arrangements for the affair with the aid of their committee. This committee is made up of Miss Dorothy Robbins, reservations; Miss Sara Jesselson and Miss Gertrude Schein, mailing; Miss Anne Rosensweig and Miss Grace Moskowitz, telephone; Mrs. Joseph Orringer, printing, and Miss Florence King, publicity.

Tickets for the dance can be purchased at the door or from any committee member.

John Muir Begins Western Trip

John Muir, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Y. Muir, of Hillsdale avenue, Dormont, formerly of Steuben street, Crafton Heights, left Saturday on an extended trip through the west. He will stop in Chicago, St. Paul, Minn., Missoula, Mont., and in Oswego, Ore., he will visit a former schoolmate, Kenneth Anderson, who once lived in Crafton Heights.

Through the Spyglass @ VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Double-check this item! The fact that NOW you can get hand-knitted silk boucles or woodpecker woolens for ONE-THIRD their former prices!

Handknits, as you know, are not to be found loitering on any curbstone! More especially, handknits at reduced prices. For they're classics . . . the never-go-out-of-style type of costumes that feminine fancies select (if they are discerning!). So . . .

Choose one of these two or three-piece suits and do well by yourself. In bright shades . . . dark shades . . . smart stitches (we noticed the shell stitch particularly) . . . and plenty of larger sizes for the woman who needs them.

Tie silk frocks . . . the beloved ones in any wardrobe. These are going on sale tomorrow at $3.98, due entirely to the genius of their buyer who knows how, where, and when to snatch-grab! Frocks that should never sell for a cent under double this sum it seems to us (after the way most cravat silks are priced). In shirtwaist styles . . . 5 different ones to choose from . . . and small patterns that distinguish these tie silks from the "just average." Not all patterns in each size . . . but when you're getting a lot of something for so little, don't be too persnickety (gift horses' mouths, and all that, you know!). Sizes for women and misses.

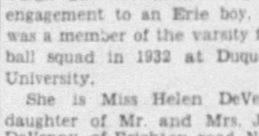
Heads up! . . . the fall's new hats have gotten into formation and are advancing upon the town! And foremost in their ranks is the news about the New York designer that works such wonders in the hatting of all who prefer something really outstanding . . . something discriminating!



For it's she that we sing of today! Select any hat you want . . . and she will copy it for you in YOUR style . . . size . . . and color preference. This last is by no means an idle jest. This department brags . . . and rightly . . . about their ability to match any fabric and color in a hat for your new fall costume.

They (or should we say "she") copies their original Lilly Dache models with which they abound . . . and of course the price of the copy (exactly like the original in every way except the Dache label) is about half the Dache price—and that's something!

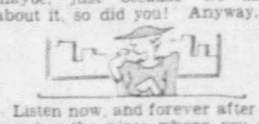
Here we've been overlooking one of the better things in life! Forgetting that you, too, might like to know about it! Thinking that maybe, just because we knew about it, so did you! Anyway . . .



Listen now, and forever after remember the place where you can always get the famous Smithfield ham treats that so many people like, and too few get! This establishment makes a specialty of such mouth-watering numbers as Smithfield ham and peanut butter sandwiches . . . with egg salad . . . with cheese . . . or with sliced tomato. Always combined with a beverage . . . priced at 25c and 30c complete.

Not just today . . . not just tomorrow . . . but on hand all the time! And psst! . . . we hear that they are thinking about putting on regular "specials" of canapes and entrees with this popular ham too!

Several "rah-s" for the new College Shop that has been opened. The shop where the girl-going-away can hop in and have herself anything from a sweater and skirt to a bathrobe and a dinner dress!

We particularly nominate the corduroy pajamas we saw for a slice of glory. They're comfortably warm and loose . . . yet well tailored and styled. In bright shades combined with darker ones . . . with metal buttons . . . side closings . . . long sleeves . . . belts . . . and any number of distinctive features to make them just that "right" garment for the college girl who wants them to stand up under anything from lounging to sliding down banisters. Sizes 14 to 20. Priced $3.98.

a pre-view of "Pecks Bad Boy" in Santa Ana next week . . . Universal can't give a good reason, but Phyllis Seiler's monicker has been changed to Mary Brooks for screen purposes . . . A couple of British film outfits are flirting with Raquel Torres for a pair of flickers . . . Jack Larue and his "heart" have gone Spanish and are regular visitors with Carole Lombard and Russ Columbo at La Golondrina on Olvera street.

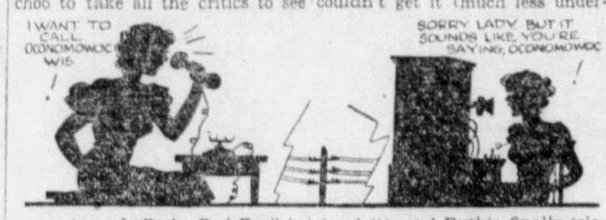
Chatter Snatching.—Nine years ago they were childhood sweethearts in "Our Gang" comedies. Today Jean Darling and Johnny Downs are back together on the same fun factory lot, both working in "Babes in Toyland."

Boulevard Buzzings . . Franklyn Pangborn is going to swish around for a role in "College Rhythm" . . . J. P. McEvoy is headed for Broadway to take another squint at the Statue of Liberty. He's scripting "The Goddess" for Paramount, which has to do with Ellis Island . . . One of Lela Rogers' "discoveries," Dore Duby, a snappy little Parisian miss, was finally called by a studio to audition a Frenchy song. Miss Duby arrived at the studio with her piano accompanist and the producer, smart lad that he is (?), said: "Well, that don't matter—just sing 'In the Gloaming.'"

Herb Magidson, who versified (meaning the lyrics) "The Continental," says he knows one song writer who received a two-cent stamp as the sum total of his royalties on a ditty. After listening to some of these alleged songs, even that would be TOO MUCH in many cases, me thinks!

Robert Gleckler is faintly puzzled about the Hollywood Theater marquee, which reads: "The Man With Two Faces," and selected shorts.

Ruth Peterson, one of Fox's prettier actresses, tried to call her mamma long distance in Oconomowoc, Wis.—but the operator couldn't get it (much less understand it), and Ruthie finally telegraphed the message and then had trouble.



Another story of "the show must go on"—Kearny Walton, handsome warbler at the El Rey Club, suddenly disappeared after singing a song. In 15 minutes he was back. This routine continued until dawn. Even the management was befuddled by his strange actions. The reason: Kearny's wife was very ill. He didn't want her to be lonesome, or his listeners to be without songs!

RKO has the "Shirley Temple craze." June Preston, just four years old, has been signed. Orders have been issued to the story department: "Turn out a kiddie yarn" . . . Leo White, the original "French Count" in some of the early movies with Chaplin, has landed a nice role.

It practically is set for George Bancroft to return to the footlights in "The Soviet Princess," Harry Guttman's play, which Edgar McGregor is staging . . .

Mr. Bancroft

With nearly all of the beautiful showgirls tied up at the various studios in musicals, Universal is running into a snag on the "Great Ziegfeld" yarn which is supposed to start next month. Most of the "original" Ziegfeld gals are too old for the movies—and there are "thousands" in the movie village . . . Chic Sale will shortly head for Broadway, where he'll try a new ditty called "The Elephant's Shepherd" . . . The Big Boy Williams and Barbara Weeks romance is getting to the serious stage . . . The lowdown on the Cupid stuff between Max Baer's kid brother and Marian Nash, which had a sudden end, was due to the gal friend tearing up Max's picture in a rage.

George H. Otte, manager of the Pitt, stepped in yesterday to set at rest all concern as to the future policy of that house. He said it will be the same as last year, pictures and vaudeville, with an occasional unit stage production. It will open Friday, August 31, the screen feature to be "Born To Be Bad," a United Artists—20th Century production, co-featuring Loretta Young and Cary Grant. The stage bill is being booked. Mr. Otte did say that a change of policy to stock had been considered—and abandoned. Unit presentations will depend upon development in that line of production as the season advances, such features just now being only in the projected state as the producers think about last season and contemplate the future.

"The Alvin Theater did not open September 1891. It was in 1887 or '88. You and others have mentioned it several times, and are wrong. It was opened before the Duquesne.

"ONE WHO KNOWS."

Dear One Who Knows: Memory does play tricks, so we did not depend upon ours, but sought the aid of the invaluable reference department of the Carnegie Library to look the matter up after your card arrived. And do you know, Dear One Who Knows, that the newspapers of September 21, 1891, carried an advertisement that "Pauline Hall's Superb Opera Company positively will open the Alvin tonight," and that the papers of the next day heaped praise upon Charles L. Davis for giving the city such a magnificent theater?

Thomas Kenyon, mentioned in this department yesterday as the new subscription secretary of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society, with office 404 Nixon Building, is well known locally in theatrical circles, having been for seven years business manager of the Pitt, under the general management of the Shuberts, who acquired it from his father, the late Thomas Kenyon, veteran Pittsburgh theater man. Mr. Kenyon, brother of Dean Elmer Kenyon of Tech Drama School, recently returned from a New York business conference with officials of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society. Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, states that the Guild is planning to have the premieres of some of its plays in his theater. Among the works it has scheduled for production are "Valley Forge," by Maxwell Anderson, with Washington as the leading figure; "Rain From Heaven," by S. N. Behrman; "A Sleeping Clergyman," an English success; "Let Freedom Ring," dramatization by Albert Bein of a novel by Grace Lumpkin. There is possibility of a play by Shaw and a musical version of "Porgy," with score by George Gershwin.

"The Shining Hour," English play, is being seen in Pittsburgh before London has had a view of it, opportunity for which will come to the British capital September 4, when Gladys Cooper, Raymond Massey and Adrianne Allen will be seen in the roles originated by them in the New York production.

Fulton to Reopen

The Fulton Theater, Sixth street house that has been closed for the summer, will reopen tomorrow with a comedy - drama, "She Learned About Sailors." Alice Faye is the young woman whose education provides the "learned" for the title and Lewis Ayres is the particular one among the "sailors" who imparts interest to her schooling. Mitchel & Durant, James Gleason and Harry Green are in the cast.

Miss Faye

During the time it has been closed the Fulton was given the customary brushing up in preparation for the opening of the new season, with a little paint here, and a little elbow grease there, etc.

Wood Fires In News

Sensational scenes of great forest fires caused by the drought are brought to the screen from Idaho and Montana in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. In Idaho miles of trees and brush, parched by the lack of rain, present a blazing inferno as an army of CCC workers and others battle the flames. A Metrotone plane flies over the great fires sweeping the forests of Montana, giving a vivid idea of the devastation that has left more than 100,000 acres in the Northwest a blackened waste.

The sensational finale of Helen Jacobs' defense of her national tennis title comes from Forest Hills, where the crowd cheers her victory over Sarah Palfrey.

On the heels of the news that Al Capone will spend the remaining eight years of his 11-year sentence in Alcatraz prison in San Francisco Bay, unusual scenes come from America's Devil's Island. The "escape proof" claim for the prison is shown in a scene of the island, a mile and a half from the mainland.

"I WON MY BET ABOUT STOCKING RUNS—

Lucky for me I learned how to cut down on runs," says college girl

"Bob heard me fussing about stocking runs and just for fun bet me I couldn't go two weeks without one. It looked like a sure thing to him, but that very day somebody tipped me off to Lux. Thanks to Lux, I won my bet. Bob came across with a five-pound box of candy. Better still is the money I now save on stockings."

Wash stockings after every wearing with Lux. Gentle Lux saves the elasticity of the threads so they give instead of breaking so easily at points of strain. Avoid ordinary soaps with harmful alkali—cake-soap rubbing—they weaken elasticity. Lux has no harmful alkali. Safe in water, safe in Lux!

All in a Day

...By... Mark Hellinger

Salesmanship

IT WAS shortly after 9 a. m. in one of the local department stores. Mr. Griffenplotz, head of the furniture department, adjusted his glasses and looked at the six men who were grouped about him.

He cleared his throat.

"Gentlemen," he said, "it is my painful duty to tell you that we are not extending ourselves to the utmost. We are behind our quota for the month of August."

Behind the quota! Horrible words! The salesmen shifted uncomfortably.

"Yes," Mr. Griffenplotz went on, "unless we do something and see that every man is on his toes every moment of the day, there are going to be some radical changes around here. I don't want to start the day with bad news—but I cannot help myself.

"You are not children. You are men of the world, each and everyone of you. You have dedicated yourselves to the service of the customers of this great and powerful institution. You have pledged yourselves to support the policies of P. C. Flishy, the great president of our grand concern.

"And what has happened? I repeat, what has happened? We have fallen behind our quota!"

He removed his glasses and wiped them again. He seemed to be on the verge of tears. Then he shook himself and spoke calmly as though by a terrific effort.

"Gentlemen," he continued in a lower voice, "I, myself, saw P. C. Flishy yesterday afternoon. I was heartbroken by the showing of the furniture department this month, and I took it upon myself to ask the great P. C.'s advice.

"He was wonderful to me. Very wonderful. 'Griffenplotz,' he said, 'the only thing I can tell you is to put more life into your salesmen. Have them on their toes every minute of the day. Make them feel that, every time they make a sale, they are helping not only our glorious department store—but the President of the United States as well. That's all I can tell you, Griffenplotz. Good day.'"

Mr. Griffenplotz sighed.

"Beautiful words, gentlemen. Lovely soul-stirring words. We must carry them with us all times, and profit by them. We must be on our toes, all of us! We must nullify the customer by diligent application. We must——"

Off to one side, the elevator door swung open. A dignified, elderly woman stepped out. It was, according to George Ch. Le Boff, the first customer of the day. Mr. Griffenplotz nodded hastily.

"I am going to show you gentlemen exactly what I mean. I, myself, will handle the customer personally. I am going to make her feel that her problem is my problem. Watch me, gentlemen. Watch me—and learn."

Mr. Griffenplotz stepped forward and bowed low. The other salesmen distributed themselves at various vantage points.

"Good morning, madame. A lovely day. Can I be of service to you this morning?"

The woman nodded. Her expression seemed oddly sad.

"Yes," she replied. "I would like to see some living room suites. Something"—she gulped—"something just a little cheerful, if you please."

"Ah, yes," returned Mr. Griffenplotz softly. "I understand, madame. Make yourself comfortable in this chair, if you will. Rest for a while—and take all the time you wish in your selection. We salesmen are there only to be of service to you."

The woman drew a handkerchief from her pocket and raised it to her eyes.

"You're very kind to me," she sniffled. "Very kind."

Mr. Griffenplotz shot several triumphant glances at his salesmen. He moved closer to the customer.

"It's nothing, madame. The motto of this institution is individual service. And when a customer is very evidently laboring under a strain, we extend every effort to be of assistance. You have suffered a loss, I take it?"

The woman's eyes filled with tears.

"Yes," she said slowly. "I lost my son. He—he was our only child."

Mr. Griffenplotz almost cried with her. Such was his salesmanship that, even though he had never married, you could have sworn that he just lost a child, too.

"Alas, madame," he sighed in sepulchral fashion, "such is the world we live in. We miss greatly those who are gone—and yet there is always something that comes along to help balance the scales.

"You, for example, have come to this marvelous institution for some new furniture. How fortunate you are that we—all men of training and understanding—are here to serve you. We will cater to your mood. We will help you to choose the proper things under the circumstances. We are your willing workers.

"In the words of P. C. Flishy, our glorious president and general manager, we have already made the customer's troubles our own."

Mr. Griffenplotz's hands were clasped in a pious attitude. His salesmen were staring at him with open mouths. What a job he was doing.

"That's fine of you," sobbed the woman. "I'm so glad you understand. It's my husband who suggested this. He said some new things around the house would help me to—to forget."

Mr. Griffenplotz nodded sympathetically.

"I quite understand," he sympathized. "How since your son died, you——"

His voice trailed off. The woman jumped to her feet and was shaking a finger in his face.

"Who said anything about my son dying?" she cried excitedly. "A fine salesman you are, and I'm through with this store. When I said I lost my boy, I meant he got married a month ago and moved down to Alabama."

And she walked out!

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 22.—Vermont Simpkins, 26, wanted to go out. He told his wife.

So, she testified in divorce court, she gave him "out" with a milk bottle.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Young Child May Suffer in Summer

Dr. Copeland

During the summer months young mothers become alarmed about the health of their infants. It is true that when the weather is very hot and there is intense humidity, infants suffer more from digestive disturbances than in cool weather.

Doctors frequently advise the children to remain the ages of 2 and 5 years. It is especially common among moving infants. In most instances the disorder can be avoided, but occasionally, despite every precaution, diarrhea occurs.

As a rule the disturbance can be traced to some irregularity of the diet, change in milk or climate. Often it is the result of some infection of the nose, throat or ears. When this is the case, the germs reach the intestine where they set up marked irritation and inflammation.

The victim of summer diarrhea first becomes cross, is easily irritated, cries constantly and refuses food. He becomes nauseated, vomits and has numerous loose bowel movements. The stools are soft, greenish in color, contain a great deal of mucus and have a foul odor.

The child runs a high fever and soon becomes weak as a result of the continued vomiting and diarrhea. This leads to a marked loss of fluid from the body tissues and is a serious menace to the health of the child. Severe diarrhea in the young child is a dangerous condition and should never be overlooked. Neglect or carelessness in the handling of these cases may result in extremely serious complications.

A child afflicted with this ailment should be under the personal supervision of a physician. Solid foods should not be given, but encourage the drinking of large quantities of water. Boiled water may be given, but other cereals and broths should be avoided.

In some instances it may be necessary to inject quantities of fluid underneath the skin or into the lower bowel. Of course, this procedure can only be taken with the advice of a physician.

As the child improves and the stools change in consistency, small quantities of food may be given. Food should be greatly restricted until after the diarrhea has disappeared. As a rule the feedings should be something like skimmed milk, junket, egg or jello.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Rowe at Hardest Hurdle Faces Only Unbeaten Club Dreyfuss Man of Word

Tigers Use Few Lefties Coast Grid Feud Ended Dublinsky Aiming High

Standing between Schoolboy Rowe and the one more victory he needs to equal the American League record of 16 straight is the only hurdle that has proved too high for him this year in his previous attempts to clear it. For if Rowe takes his regular turn on the mound for the Tigers, his next appearance, following his fifteenth consecutive win yesterday over the Red Sox, will be made against the Senators in the four-game series starting today in Washington. And Washington is the only club among his American League opponent that the Detroit ace has not been able to beat this season. He started against the Senators twice and was shelled off the hill both times, first in two and two-thirds innings on May 20 at Detroit, and again in five and one-third innings on June 20 at Washington.

Schoolboy Rowe

So Rowe will have to enjoy a change of luck to get over the final barrier and equal the American League record of 16 successive wins pitched in one season, set first by Walter Johnson and Joe Wood in 1912, and equaled by Lefty Grove in 1931. But even if he fails, the 22-year-old right-hander has made himself the outstanding pitcher of the year with his 15 wins in a row. Here's the way he rolled up his present total: Defeated New York four times, 4-2, 8-3, 7-3, 2-0; defeated Philadelphia twice, 8-4, 17-8; defeated Boston twice, 11-4, 8-4; defeated Chicago three times, 11-1, 16-15, 14-0; defeated Cleveland twice, 5-2, 6-5, and defeated St. Louis twice, 12-3, 5-4.

WORD OF DREYFUSS HIS BOND—SNYDER

Observing the monument in deep center at Forbes Field while the Giants were playing their farewell series here, Coach Frank Snyder was led to pay a tribute to the memory of Barney Dreyfuss, late Pirate owner and president.

"All baseball might well erect a monument to Mr. Dreyfuss and honor his memory," Snyder said. "The game has seen few like him. It wasn't only his rare baseball ability that made him great. He was one in a million for honor and square dealing. You had to have business contacts with Mr. Dreyfuss fully to know and appreciate his wonderful character. While I was operating the Fort Worth club in the Texas League, I had many dealings with him in the buying and selling of players and in various other business channels. During all that time there never was so much as a scrap of paper or the scratch of a pen between us. Every agreement was merely verbal, but I could always feel sure that Mr. Dreyfuss was one magnate to whom that amounted to an iron-clad pact. He kept every agreement to the last letter. It can be said of the late Pirate owner more truthfully than of any other man I ever have known in baseball that his word was his bond. You could stake your life on it."

TIGERS WIN WITH LITTLE SOUTHPAW AID

Admittedly Bill Terry, Mel Ott and Joe Moore are not troubled a whole lot by southpaw pitching, but anyhow these and the other left-hand hitters in the Giant offensive won't have to worry much about having to face forkside hurling if the Tigers are their opponents in the next World Series. There will be no danger of another experience of the southpaw kind they suffered last fall, when Earl Whitehill, of the Senators, shut them out with only five hits in the third game of the derby. For the Detroit club is almost barren of left-hand pitchers and certainly has no series starters of that type.

Earl Whitehill

While not quite equaling the achievement of the Yankees of 1922 or the Cubs of 1929 in winning a pennant without a southpaw slabman, Mickey Cochrane has come pretty close to doing so. Good left-handers are supposed to be essential to the success of any club in the majors these days, yet Cochrane carries only two—Elon Hogsett and Charley Fischer—and their part in the pennant drive has been merely a minor one, as Fischer has won only four games and Hogsett only two. Incidentally, Hogsett is not an Indian, contrary to general belief in baseball circles. That comes from such a pretty good authority as his mother, who told an interviewer at the family home in Ness City, Kan., that there isn't a drop of Indian blood in Elon's veins. "And I think I should know," she added. Hogsett got the nickname "Chief" when he roomed with an Indian player named Mose Poelaw while pitching for Cushing in the Southwestern League. Since Elon has straight black hair, high cheek bones and other characteristics of the race, the impression got abroad that he, too, was an Indian.

COAST SCHOOLS BURY FOOTBALL HATCHET

One of the most popular and colorful of the annual football games on the Pacific Coast, and which had appeared to be off for good, has been restored to the schedule for this year by the patching up of differences between St. Mary's and Santa Clara. They severed relations last November after a 6-to-6 tie that was followed by a free-for-all among partisan spectators.

Now they've buried the hatchet, and the elevens coached by Slip Madigan and Clipper Smith, both former Notre Dame players, will meet as usual in San Francisco the coming fall on a date yet to be selected. The schools broke off relations in 1921 after a similar row, but resumed play two years later. The game draws 50,000 or more fans annually.

DUBLINSKY TRIES TO ENTER TITLE CIRCLE

A Chicago fighter well known to Pittsburgh ring followers will make an attempt in New York soon to qualify as a contender for the welterweight championship. He is Harry Dublinsky, who fought here four times last year against Frankie Bojarski, Tony Falco, Wesley Ramey and Charley Baxter. It's quite a sizable contract that Dublinsky has cut out for himself in trying to crash the title row, for all he has to do is to beat Tony Canzoneri in a 10-rounder postponed from tonight.

Harry Dublinsky

There will be no disputing Dublinsky's right to tangle with the biggest stars in the 147-pound division if he can get over this hurdle, but there is a strong prospect that he won't, the advantage he will have in weight notwithstanding. It is not with the idea of seeking honors in that class that Canzoneri has started picking on the welters, but just for the purpose of keeping busy and staying in condition. He is booked for another shot at the lightweight crown against Barney Ross within 60 days after the latter's welterweight fight with Jimmy McLarnin on September 6. A defeat in the meantime might cause him to be deprived of that match, so it's a safe bet that Tony will not take any chances and that Dublinsky will have to beat Canzoneri's ex, which is still pretty good.

Western Pennsylvania's representative in the national softball tournament, scheduled to be staged in Chicago, beginning September 8, will be determined this evening when the Commercial Garage team opposes the Campbell Shamrocks in the final battle for the senior division championship of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament at Greenlee Field. The Shamrocks hail from East Liberty, while the Commercial aggregation is from the Hill district. Preceding the senior battle will be the intermediate finale. The first game is at 5:15. PIRATE SCOUT REPORTS ON PROSPECTS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Sing a song of baseball,
Pocket full of jack,
Four and twenty Pirates
Off the pennant track;
When the season opened
The birds began to sing—
The Bucs would be the "berries"
If they paid off in the spring.

Some of these years Mother Goose will send a Cinderella and the Pirates will have a happy ending, but in the light of events of the past two weeks at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh baseball followers today were convinced that there would be no story-book finish to the present pennant race.

Engaged in exhibition play on this open date, the Pirates yesterday fell further away from a little slice of world series pie when they dropped another contest to Casey Stengel's Dodgers.

DODGERS' FAREWELL

It was the farewell performance for Casey and his Flatbush minstrels, and before leaving the city they gave the key back to Mayor McNair and thanked one and all for their kind hospitality.

There was no comfort for Pirate fans in receiving the thanks of Casey's Clan. A little checkup of the records disclosed that the Dodgers have won no less than 12 of the 18 games played between the two clubs this year.

So the best thing to do, perhaps, is to start thinking of and laying plans for next year, and that, dear reader, is what Messers Benswanger and Traynor are doing at this very hour.

Scout Carleton Molesworth reached the home office yesterday after a long and painstaking visit to many minor leagues. Scout Bill

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: LONDON ON THE THAMES—It is popularly believed that there is only one London in all the world, but there is one other—London, Ontario—a city of about 60,000 inhabitants, half way between Toronto and Detroit. And Believe It or Not, this London of the New World also is on the Thames River—the names being taken from the ancient city and river of England, respectively. THE FASTEST HUMAN—Probably no foot-racer in history has a more unique record than that of Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette University, who has won 89 of his 96 races, and bettered the world record 13 times. At 40 yards he has won nine times; 50 yards, once; 60 yards, 11 times; 60 meters, three times, 70 yards, once; 100 yards, 18 times; 100 meters, 15 times; 200 meters, 14 times; and 220 yards, 17 times. A CHAMPION JOB HOLDER—Herman Kabakoff, of Cincinnati, isn't exactly proud of his record—375 jobs in about nine years' time—but he does feel that he has gained a keen insight into businesses of all kinds. Bumped from pillar to post, Kabakoff has taken any job that has come along to earn even a meager living for support of his family, and would like nothing better than to settle down at one steady job and work ahead. Though many lines of business have hit his fancy at various times, nothing to him is more appealing than theatrical work.

Stars to Compete In Tennis Tourney

BEAVER, Pa., Aug. 22.—The twenty-eight annual Beaver County open tennis tournament, to be held at Ambridge September 1, 3 and 8, will draw many of the leading net stars of the Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio district.

The Louis Ingram trophy cup will be awarded the singles champion. This cup will become the permanent possession of the player winning it three times. Paul M. Barber, Sewickley star, won the cup in 1933. Robert T. Lampus, Bellevue, was the winner in 1932; Carl Dennison, Youngstown, in 1931, and John Hecker, New Brighton, in 1930.

Gelding Gets Win In Straight Heats

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Straight heat victories were scored in the two-feature events on the Grand Circuit harness program at the Illinois State Fair yesterday afternoon.

Peter Paul, gray gelding by Peter Hanley from the stable of P. Robinson, of Decatur, Ind., won the 2:20 pace by finishing first in all three heats while the rest of the field was badly split. The best time was 2:04 in the first heat.

The 2:16 class trot found Laconic, entered by Ben Horine, of Carthage, Mo., the class of the field.

SENIOR WINNER TO PLAY IN CHICAGO

By PHIL GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

The team that is to represent Western Pennsylvania in the national softball tournament at Chicago next month will become known this evening at Greenlee Field when the Campbell Shamrocks, of the East End, and the Commercial Garage towers, of the Hill District, meet in the final game in the senior division in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament.

The battle involving the seniors is to follow a clash between the Gabbel Cycles, of New Kensington, winners of the bracket title, and the New Kensington Merchants for the intermediate division championship. The doubleheader is to mark the close of tournament battling which began 10 weeks ago, with 96 teams competing in four divisions. The finals in the girls' and junior divisions were staged last Monday, with the West Newton Scholastics and Commercials emerging the victors.

FIRST GAME AT 5:15

The first game of this evening's double bill is to start at 5:15 and the seniors will take the field immediately after the intermediate division rivals have concluded their fray. Tickets for the doubleheader are being sold for 25 cents each. They will be on sale at the lobby in the Sun-Telegraph Building and at the downtown office, Fifth avenue and Market street, until 2 o'clock, after which hour they will be available at Greenlee Field.

The senior division winner is to go to Chicago for the national tourney, September 8 to 10, as the guest of the Sun-Telegraph.

The finalists in this evening's games appear to be quite evenly matched. The Shamrocks have not been beaten in senior competition play, while the Commercials suffered only one reverse in 10 games. The Gabbels have not been defeated in the intermediate class, and they handed the Merchants their only defeat in the bracket.

OSKIN TO PITCH

Anthony (Bullet) Oskin, who has been a sensation in the senior division race, will pitch for the Campbells. His opponent on the mound may be Irving Brenner, former Duquesne University athlete, or William (Hooks) Jordan, who defeated the O'Tooles in a semi-final game.

The Shamrocks have averaged a little better than 10 runs per game against opposition in the bracket and elimination play, while the Commercials have averaged slightly more than 13. The opposition has averaged slightly less than four runs per game against the Shamrocks and a little better than four runs per contest against the Commercials. The Shamrocks scored five shutouts in 10 games. One of these was won via the forfeit route from the Hunzekers. The Commercials also won a game by forfeit, but they have not scored a shutout.

Although the East-Enders may have an edge in the pitching department, the Commercials appear to boast harder and longer hitters. The teams appear to be evenly matched in the outfield. Both the Shamrocks and the Hill District lads have strong infields.

Manager Sam Salvator's Gabbel Cycles have been playing great ball, and although they hold a victory over the Merchants in the Intermediate Division play, a tough battle is anticipated. Regardless who wins this game, the title will be held by a New Kensington team, for both hail from that district.

OAKMONT GOLFERS TAKE LEAD IN DISTRICT TEAM MATCHES

HIGHLAND CLUB IS SECOND AT FOX CHAPEL

By TOM BIRKS

The Oakmont Country Club took a big lead in the foursomes play in the Western Pennsylvania team golf championship at the Fox Chapel Country Club this morning when it scored 6 points. Highland, the defending titleholder, was second with 4 points, and Shannon Heights trailed with 2 points.

At the Allegheny Country Club Shannopin led in the foursomes with 6½ points. St. Clair was second with 5 points and Churchill Valley third, with ½ point.

At Oakmont, the Pittsburgh Field Club won the foursomes with 8½ points. South Hills was second with 4½ points and Greensburg third, with 2 points.

The annual tournament of the Syria Temple was being held at the Aleoma Country Club. A dinner will climax the affair this evening.

The summaries:

AT FOX CHAPEL

Oakmont—J. F. Marks and George H. Flinn, Jr., 2 points; Nat Babcock and I. W. Danforth, no points. Dr. R. E. Hamlin and H. C. Friend II, 2 points. Tony Jannetti and W. L. Marks, 2 points. Total, 6 points.

Highland—Joe Kinston and Hagie Wolf, 1 point; James Samuel and Jerry Wyman, 2 points. Frank Nash and Dr. Joe Stanger, 2 points. R. Russell and partner, lost by default. Total, 4 points.

Shannon Heights—Frank Campbell and George Todd, no points. W. Hoskin and E. Hagger, 1 point. Frank Moore and J. H. Dunkelberger, no points. Dr. Price and Frank Alexander, 1 point. Total, 2 points.

FLINN WINS MEDAL

George Flinn, of Oakmont; Knox M. Young, of Shannopin; Billy Marks, of Oakmont; Joe W. Oliver, of Fox Chapel, and Sidney Carson, of Greensburg, will represent this district when the national amateur championship gets under way over the links of the Brookline (Mass.) club, September 10.

These players were "elected" at Oakmont yesterday as 21 of the leading amateurs of the tri-state section battled it out for the five places alloted to this district. Young and Flinn led the parade, tieing for the medal with 156 for the 36 holes of medal play. Billy Marks had 160, Joe Oliver 161 and Carson took 162.

In the playoff for the medal Flinn defeated Young, getting a birdie 4, to Young's par 5 on the first hole. Twice within a week Young has been beaten in medal playoffs. Bill Farquhar nosed him out for the West Penn amateur championship medal last week at the Field Club.

WEPPNER FAILS

Just outside of the select circle was Joe Royston, Jr., of Highland. Joe turned in a 163, as did Tom Bloch, the West Virginia State champion. A big disappointment was the failure of Fred Weppner, the Field Club vet, to get one of the berths. Weppner appeared certain to be in until he hit the back nine. Then he blew wide open.

Of the five that will play in the national tourney, Billy Marks is the only player that took part in last year's event. The scores yesterday were exceptionally high, which is all the more remarkable as the day was ideal for golf. The scores:

George H. Flinn, Jr., Oakmont	79	77	156
K. M. Young, Jr., Shannopin	79	77	156
Billy Marks, Oakmont	79	81	160
J. W. Oliver, Fox Chapel	81	80	161
Sid Carson, Jr., Greensburg	78	84	162
Joe Royston, Jr., Highland	80	83	163
T. M. Bloch, Wheeling, W. Va.	82	81	163

MARY KUHN VICTOR

Mary Kuhn, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, led the field in the 18-hole medal play tournament staged by the West Penn Women's Golf Association at Longue Vue yesterday. She carded a low gross 89. Mrs. W. G. Boggs, of Chartiers Heights, was second with 100 and Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, took a 102.

Mrs. J. R. Murry, of St. Clair, took the low net honors with 99-16—83.

Leaders In Amateur Qualifying Test

KNOX M. YOUNG, JR., SHANNOPIN — GEORGE H. FLINN, JR., OAKMONT, WINNER OF PLAYOFF

Finishing the 36-hole medal play qualifying round for the national amateur tournament at Oakmont yesterday deadlocked at 156, Flinn, of the home club, defeated Young in a one-hole playoff, 4 to 5, to take the medalist honors. Billy Marks, of Oakmont; Joseph W. Oliver, of Fox Chapel, and Sidney Carson, Jr., of Greensburg, were the other three Pittsburgh district qualifiers. The local scores were the highest in the country. These are Sun-Telegraph pictures.

MISS VAN WIE GOLF VICTOR

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, easily captured the Western Women's Golf Derby today with a 72-hole total of 323 shots.

The national women's champion's successive rounds were 83-76-82-82.

Miss Round Ranked Above Miss Jacobs

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Dorothy Round, of England, gets the call over Helen Jacobs, of the United States, as the best woman player in the world in a compilation of the first 10 announced today by Pierre Gillou, president of the International Tennis Federation. The United States has three players on the list, which follows:

1, Dorothy Round, England; 2, Helen Jacobs, United States; 3, Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, England; 4, Mme. Rene Mathieu, France; 5, Joan Hartigan, Australia; 6, Sarah Palfrey, United States; 7, Hilda Krahwinkel, Germany; 8, Lolette Payot, Switzerland; 9, Carolin Babcock, United States, 10; Rollin Cooquerque, Holland.

Ellwood City High Faces Tough Season

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Aug. 22.—The Ellwood City High School football team, coached by Ganzy Benedict, former Duquesne University star, will play a tough schedule of 10 games this fall.

Ellwood City will have a strong squad of veterans available for the football season and expects to enjoy a fine season. The schedule:

September 15, Union Township; September 21, at New Castle; September 29, Butler; October 6, at Beaver Falls; October 13, open; October 20, at Sharpsville; October 27, at Monaca; November 3, at Aliquippa; November 10, New Brighton; November 17, Rochester.

CHILLYSAUCE

That Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto should have been farmed out for this entire season was the opinion of more than one observer in the springtime. The Coast stripling is as slick in fielding around the middle bag as you would care to see in a rookie, but like many a youngster he was rushed too fast.

Arky Vaughan apparently was the victim of the same rushing tactics in 1932. Boys under age, and especially when they have had but one year of professional ball, are not ready to hold up the toughest part of an infield.

Pep Young, doing his stuff around the keystone sack at Albany, may have a lot to say relative to the center of the Pirate diamond next year. There is a young man who is a ball hawk in its strictest sense. He is like a cat on his feet and he can hold any kind of a drive with either hand. There are some fellows who will bet that Pep can outthrow anybody on the Pittsburgh club.

The fact that Young fell down in a few pinch-hitting roles hurt his chances here. The same experience had something to do with the dismissal of a kid named Cronin several years ago. Pep was able to bat .300 or better in the Western League and he deserves another chance.

Woodie Jensen caused a laugh in the Pirate dugout when Young was being discussed. One player was sticking up for Young when Jensen, masking his real feeling well, exclaimed:

"Pep has no kicking coming. He got his chance and booted it. Didn't they push him up there cold against Mungo with three on the sacks? What more does he want?"

Mungo, by the way, was so far off in his control yesterday he had to aim for the center of the plate to get his "swifter" over the platter and when he did the Buccos were teeing off on him. And Jensen had the tough experience of facing him in a clinch. Lloyd Waner was out of whack in the eighth and Woodie batted and came through with a neat hit.

The Pirates nicked the big righthander for enough line drives to win a couple of ball games, but Van had a horseshoe around him all afternoon.—

Harriman Filly Wins Feature Trot

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The bay filly Lucre, owned by the Arden Homestead stable of E. Roland Harriman and driven by Will Dickerson, yesterday won the $800 stake for 2-year-old trotters, feature of the opening of the three-day harness meeting in connection with the Orange County Fair.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—What was the name of the full-blooded Indian who once was a regular catcher for the New York Giants?

2—Who was the former major league manager who met his death in a railroad wreck?

3—Who is the former University of Pittsburgh football star who twice coached at Washington & Lee University?

4—Who were called the best outfielders in the old Federal League when that circuit was disbanded?

5—Where did George McLaren, former Panther fullback, coach football after being graduated from Pitt?

(Answers in Want Ad section tomorrow. See today's Want Ad section for answers to yesterday's questions.)

To the Sports Editor:

I have a squawk to make with some of the financial editors. As I said before, I have practically no business at all reading the financial pages, but once in a while I do just to see how the other half lives. I don't like stories in which percentages are used. "Steel up 2%," "Steel down 2%." Or earnings up or down so much per cent. I remember a dinky league team years ago that had five people out to the game one day and the next day 10 people came out. The newspaper said the next day, "Attendance increased today 100 per cent over yesterday." Now I ask you!

BLUE JAYS WIN

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Charley Gilbert's New Orleans Jesuit Blue Jays last night defeated North Little Rock, 15 to 9, to win the championship of the sixth district, American Legion baseball tournament. The triumph qualified for participation in the western sectional play tomorrow at Topeka, Kan.

171 QUALIFY FOR AMATEUR

Associated Press.

One hundred and seventy-one mashie-wielders fought their way into the national amateur golf championship in the annual sectional qualifying rounds in 23 districts yesterday.

The 36 holes of medal play, scattered over courses all over the country, was notable principally by the manner in which favorites marched safely into the fold which will begin the all match-play championship proper at the Country Club of Brookline, Mass., September 10.

With more than 700 participating in the sectional tests, the only notable stars who failed to make the grade were Gene Homans, of Englewood, N. J., runner-up to Bobby Jones for the title in 1930; George Voigt, former Walker Cup player from New York, and Walter Emery, of Oklahoma, former intercollegiate champion.

Otherwise there were no major surprises. Scores, as a general rule, ran high, but Verne (Specs) Stewart, a Stanford University student from Albuquerque, put together two 73s for a total of 138 at Denver. The highest score posted by any sectional leader was at Pittsburgh where the tough Oakmont course made scores of 156 tops for the day.

Among the leading stars who qualified were:

Jack Westland and George Dawsoom in the Chicago district; Johnny Fischer, Jess Westland, a Walker Cup player, at Evanston; Rudy Knepper, Watts Gunn and Albert (Scotty) Campbell at Buffalo; Charles Yates, amateur champion of New York; Jack Munzer at Boston; Billy Howell and Gene Vinson, Mississippi amateur and open champion, at Baltimore; J. Wood Platt at Philadelphia; Chuck Kocsis, Jack Peace, the Canadian, and Detroit's Bobby Eames, at Detroit; Johnny Goodman, former national open king, and Robey Blose, at Omaha; Fred Haas, of New Orleans, and Leland Hamman, Texas Mexican champion, at Dallas, and Sam Perry, of Hermitage, at Nashville.

DEMPSEY-FIRPO ACT FEATURES POLICE SHOW

By JESS CARVER

Judging from the way in which the boys have been tuning out for their fat-cuffing here of late, it would appear that the mock sport, like the automobile, is here to stay.

Billy Miller

First they turned 'em away at Hickey Park on Monday evening for the Broullard-Ambers-Green show and then last night, at Forbes Field, a conservative estimate placed the crowd for the police pension fund amateur show at a cool 18,000, no pun intended. The night was almost perfect for boxing, the card was all of that and the scrappers gave their all, several times over.

The program was featured by the defeat of one Pittsburgh Golden Gloves champion, Billy Miller, of the Pittsburgh Boys Club, four knockouts, two of 'em technical, and a stirring battle between two lightweights, Jiggs McKnight and George Marino. The latter put on a slam-bang tussle, knocking and pushing one another through the ropes a la Dempsey-Firpo and coming within an ace of recording a double knockout. Here's what happened:

BOTH NEAR K. O.

In the final round, after Marino had toppled from the ring into the first row seats in the second, the boys collided in a neutral corner and Marino again went crashing onto the apron of the ring. As he struck, his head hit with a resounding thump and he practically was out. McKnight, unable to stop himself, crashed into him and had the bridge of his nose cut as he rammed into one of George's shin bones.

Referee Ernie Siesto pulled both lads back into the ring, and figuring both were near a kayo sent 'em to their corners for a rest, intending to award the bout to the one able to resume action at the end of the minute rest period on a technical knockout. Imagine Ernie's surprise when both came out to finish the round, which they did. Marino won a split decision, the judges giving him the nod and Siesto voting for McNight. There were many present who thought Siesto was right.

Sammy Angott, hard punching 126-pounder from Washington, Pa., rallied in the final round to beat Billy Miller, the present Golden Gloves champion. Angott was away off form and didn't win by any great margin.

Matt Ozniak laid a left hook on the chin of Gene Auglik in the second round that started Gene on the way out and subsequently won by a technical knockout. The blow was so hard it shook the Augliks for seven generations.

CLARK KNOCKOUT VICTOR

Jimmy Clark, one of the classiest amateurs in the ring, knocked out Homer Johnston, hard hitting P. V. A. C. blond, in the second round, the count barely beating the timer's toll. But Homer had enough. Clark, weighing 147 pounds, hits with the power of a heavyweight.

Lou Berg, a Monte Sirko A. C. heavyweight hope, substituted for Johnny Daniels, Charleroi knockout star, and toppled Pete (Moby Dick) Landini, of West Newton, in the second round.

The card was arranged, and how, by Danny Ryan, who turned out a noble job. He was assisted ably by Dr. W. L. McClelland, state athletic commissioner, Irish Chick Rodgers, Ernie Besto and Al Grayber served as referees and Stanley Phillips, Walter McVey and Jap Williams were the judges. Other results:

118-pound class—Felix Cashella defeated Gene Gibbons.

126-pound class—Emil Joseph defeated Vic Yarone. Sammy Angott defeated Billy Miller, Pittsburgh Golden Glove champion.

160-pound class—Steve Kobeda defeated Billy Wright.

175-pound class—George Billner defeated Woodrow White.

Hinchman is due to get back any day on top of his extensive tour of the Pacific Coast League, the Texas League and other circuits.

Binoculars inferred today that Mademoiselle, the same girl who developed or discovered Burleigh Grimes, Pie Traynor, Billy Herman, Johnny Morrison and several other topliners, had a kid the ability of several players in the Southern League. Moley is not a man of many words, but he said:

STAR PLAYERS SCARCE

"Standout ball players, which means boys ready to play in the majors, are mighty scarce, but we may have a few next year who will fill the bill. Pitcher Clarence Strous, of Little Rock, and recently purchased by the Pirates, is a bit young, but he should be a dandy in a couple of years. I also like the style of Outfielder Elmer Trapp, Pittsburgh boy who plays regularly with Little Rock, and that other farmhand, Nick Etten, is a much improved outfielder."

Mollenworth managed the Birmingham Club of the Southern Association for many years and he knows the South like a book.

The veteran sleuth also paid a visit to the Albany Club of the International League where five Pirates are engaged. Moley thinks Cy Blanton "has what it takes," but he is a bit disappointed in Cy's lack of control. Hal Finney he says, is an improved receiver and Third baseman Bill Brubaker is now a better performer. Pep Young, recently sent to Albany by the Pirates to make room for Burleigh Grimes, is a "natural" in the opinion of Mollenworth. Bill Harris is pitching like a star for Albany.

The Pirates and major league clubs will be permitted to load up again in 10 days, and unless Albany is in the league playoff, the Buccos' farmhands will all be recalled. And when Hinchman returns he may have something to offer.

FRENCH CHASED

The Bucs walloped Fireball Mungo all over the lot yesterday, but many of their line smashes were nailed and the Dodgers, also in a hitting mood, romped away with a 9-5 victory. Larry French was shelled off the mound in the fifth and Hal Smith also was batted hard.

The enemy won the game in the fifth and six innings by scoring seven runs. Chapman's homer in the sixth off Smith was good for two. Red Lucas finished with a lot of stuff.

The Phillies will be here tomorrow to open a three-game series. The Pirates are playing in Youngstown, Pa., this afternoon.

HOYT GRACES SEALS' BILL

Waite Hoyt, veteran righthander of the Pittsburgh Pirates and himself a former world series hero, will give a talk on the New York Yankees, Babe Ruth, Mickey Cochrane and the coming world series as featured guest of the Trained Seals, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, in their weekly broadcast over station WCAE at 6:45 this evening.

Waite Hoyt

Hoyt, who has turned out to be the most consistent winner on the Pirates' mound staff, will have some interesting data on the current major league pennant races. He will be interviewed by Charles J. (Chilly) Doyle, baseball writer of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The 15-minute program will be in charge of Julius Levin, of the sports department, and Alan French, WCAE announcer.

PROS IN THIRD ROUND

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Action in the national professional tennis title tournament became more serious today, with the opening of the third round of singles. The features of the schedule promised to be the meeting of Jack Crawford, Australian star, and Paul Heston, of Washington, D. C.

RUMORS DRIVE CHARLEY BACK TO CUBS

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Disturbed by rumors that followed his sudden departure for St. Louis to recuperate, as he put it, a few days, Manager Charley Grimm rushed back to take command of the Chicago Cubs again yesterday.

Charley Grimm

At the suggestion of Owner Philip K. Wrigley and President William Walker, of the Cubs, Grimm left Saturday for St. Louis to rest a few days and seek the advice of his family physician about a leg injury that has bothered him for some time. Immediately rumors flew about that he was being "eased out" as pilot. Owner Wrigley and President Walker then issued statements to the effect that Grimm was merely getting a well-earned rest and that he undoubtedly would be back at the helm by Sunday, Grimm said:

"The rest did me good, but when I read about all those rumors and the goings on there fighting for the pennant, why, I just hopped a midnight train and came back. Mr. Wrigley and Mr. Walker were pretty swell in suggesting I take a rest, but I couldn't stay away any longer. Furthermore, Dan Hurst is troubled with a bad shoulder and probably would injure himself playing for me at first."

Chicago Marksman Cops Rifle Match

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—E. Z. Lord, of Chicago, won the small bore Wimbledon rifle match yesterday with a score of 196 out of a possible 200 in the national championship tournament at the Camp Perry ranges. Lord defeated 200 competitors.

The match was fired on a 200-yard range with 20 shots for record. The next three competitors finished with scores of 195 each—H. A. Swigart, of Bowling Green, O.; R. H. Gould, of Louisville, Ky., and Thurman Randle, of Dallas, Tex.

KIT KATS LOSE

Joe Mellaphen, Sprott's leading pitcher, allowed but five hits as the Sprott Shirts blanked the Kit Kats, 5 to 0, on Miss Ford's field, East Brookline. The Sprott City defeated the Kit Kats last evening, 10-5.

ROWE NEARS NEW RECORD

DETROIT STAR ANNEXES 15TH WIN IN ROW

Associated Press.

Seven trailing clubs in the American League apparently can look upon the Detroit Tigers not only as prospective representatives of their circuit in the world series but as harbingers of financial prosperity as well.

The dashing progress of the Tigers to the top of the standing and the rise of 22-year-old Lynwood Rowe to pitching fame has made Detroit the host of attractions in his final swing around the East. First they drew over 150,000 fans in their five-game series at New York, then a record throng of nearly 50,000 at Boston last Sunday and finally they attracted the largest mid-week crowd of the Red Sox season, 15,836, to see them take the series final, 8-6, and Rowe win his fifteenth consecutive smound triumph yesterday.

CLOSE TO RECORD

The lanky "schoolboy" was less impressive than he was against the Yanks as he won his nineteenth triumph of the year and approached the American League consecutive record of 16, held jointly by Walter Johnson, Joe Wood and Lefty Grove. He allowed nine hits, including a double and a triple by his pitching rival, Fritz Ostermueller, and the Sox had the score tied at 4-4 in the sixth when Detroit manufactured a three-run rally that won the game.

The triumph increased the Tigers' lead to 5½ games as the St. Louis Browns closed their final visit to the Yankee Stadium with an 8 to 6 victory, their first of the year on the New York field. Lou Gehrig provided most of the opposition for the Browns, clouting his thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth home runs.

The third-place Cleveland Indians improved their position by putting on a nine-run rally in the ninth at the expense of the Athletics and winning, 12 to 11. Chicago and Washington had an open date.

CARDS GAIN GROUND

The third-place Cardinals registered the only important National League gain when they defeated the Braves 6 to 2 behind Tex Carleton's seven-hit hurling. While they won both the Giants and the Cubs suffered unexpected setbacks. The league leaders called upon Fred Fitzsimmons, who had only two days' rest after Saturday's two-hit shutout of the Reds and Cincinnati belted him out in the fifth, winning 4-3.

The Phillies ended a seven-game losing streak with a 6-1 triumph over the Cubs when Fidgety Phil Collins turned in a six-hit hurling job.

The Dodgers continued their domination over the Pirates by slamming Larry French and Hal Smith for nine runs in six innings and winning the series final 9 to 5. It was their twelfth victory in 18 games against Pittsburgh.

Personalities in Softball

Louis Pierro played a nice game at shortstop as the Commercial Garage Juniors defeated the Pioneers, of Carnegie, for the Western Pennsylvania junior championship in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament which ends today. The West Penn champions also won the Bracket II title by scoring six straight victories. Louis, who is only 16 years old, is a graduate of Fifth Avenue High School. The Hill district team did not suffer a defeat in tournament play.

Louis Pierro

Paul Landau, former Schenley High School baseball star, who has been fielding in great style at shortstop for the Campbell Shamrocks in their rise to the final of the senior division playoff series, is one of the leading performers in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament. The Shamrocks clash with the Commercials this evening at Greenlee Field for the right to be the Western Pennsylvania representative in the national tournament at Chicago, which opens September 8.

REDWINGS WIN, ADD TO LEAD

Greensburg's Redwings, of the Penn State Association, boosted their lead over the McKeesport Bucs a full game yesterday as 4-to-1 games featured the card.

The Wings tallied five runs in the first and three in the seventh and final inning to beat Monessen, 8 to 4, at Monessen. Bunkel and Mclean toiled for Greensburg on the slab.

McKeesport, limited to eight scattered hits by Coffman, bowed to Charleroi, 4 to 1. Bateman hit a home run to save McKeesport from a shutout.

Washington downed Jeannette, 6 to 1, as Haley twirled a four-hit game. Moore hurled well for the losers, who collected half their runs in the last inning.

Lundgren, Former Cubs Pitcher, Dies

MARENGO, Ill., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Death has ended the career of Carl Lundgren, 53, hurler for the Chicago Cubs in the "Tinker to Evers to Chance" days, and for the past 14 years baseball coach at the University of Illinois. Lundgren died suddenly last night while visiting relatives, a victim of a heart attack.

A baseball and football hero at Illinois in 1889, 1900-01-02, he joined the old Cubs in 1904. He was a member of the championship teams of 1905-06 and 1908. He was assistant baseball coach at Princeton in 1912 and 1914. From Princeton he went to the University of Michigan as head coach. While at Michigan he had George Sisler, later with the St. Louis Browns, rated as the best first baseman in baseball.

Immaculate Heart Faces Cabbie Nine

Defeated decisively by Homewood in a City League engagement last evening, the Immaculate Heart nine will make another try this evening as it takes on the Parmelee tossers at Frick Park. Parmelee is seeking to sew up second place.

In the Independent League, the Millikins, of Wilkinsburg, meet Pitcairn at Pitcairn.

BUTCH-LEE TOP BOXING SHOW AT MILLVALE

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Lee Kennedy vs. Frankie Wine, 10 rounds, featherweights.
Amateur bouts for benefit of Mt. Oliver Baseball Club.

By JAMES MILLER

Jules Beck, dapper matchmaker, the recipient of the first real break the fight fans offered here in several years, the big gate of last Monday night, has decided to try his luck again.

Next Monday night, at Hickey Park, Millvale, the same arena that housed the $4,000 Brouillard-Green crowd, Beck will offer three 10-rounders and two sixes. In the feature bout, Mose Butch, hard-hitting Oakland southpaw, is to meet Tennessee Paul Lee, of Terre Haute, Ind., and in the semi-final, Frankie Hughes, another Hoosier State mitt-thrower, is paired with Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight, of Elizabeth.

Mike Barto, knock-t star of New Kensington, will be in another 10. Marty Gornick and Nat Litfin also will have spots on the card.

Beck also has another match in the making for September 6. He plans to use Anson Green against Tait Littman, of Chicago, who recently battled Ted Yarosz. Littman's manager wired Beck his o. k. for the bout, but the Green end of the affair has yet to be closed.

The program is almost the same as the one Beck planned for last Thursday night at Greenlee Field, but pulled it out in order to give his sellout affair of last Monday full sway. The only change is that Jackie Wilson originally was in with Lee.

The promoters of the Yarosz-Dundee fight for the middleweight championship, at Forbes Field, September 11, are working on a good preliminary card for the show. Marty Gornick, stablemate of Yarosz, boxes Johnny Durso in the opener. Wires are out seeking opponents for Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, who is fighting in old-time form, and Anson Green, of Homestead, the gent whose courage is something that a great number of folks would like to have. If good foes can be secured for both Pirrone and Green, the fans will be treated to a great program of supporting bouts.

Lou Brouillard and his manager, Maurice Lemoine, left for Worcester, Mass., today by automobile, but without the $1,200 which Lou collected for his bout with Anson Green Monday night. Brouillard's end of the "gate" was stolen from his room in a downtown hotel late yesterday, and Beck had to finance the Brouillard-Lemoine trip home.

Australia Cricket Team Is Victor

Butler Horses Bring $27,800 at Auction

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The final vendue of the 1934 yearlings sales were held last night with the entire stock of the late James Butler going under the hammer.

In addition, 11 head left over from Monday night's sale when fire in an adjoining store halted proceedings, were auctioned off. All told 45 head went on the block on the final night and brought a total of $41,300 for an average of $918.

Thirty-four head were sold by the Butler estate and brought $27,800, an average of $818. This lot includes the famous Questionaire, Sting and Apprentice, besides the brood mares with foals, younger mares and yearlings.

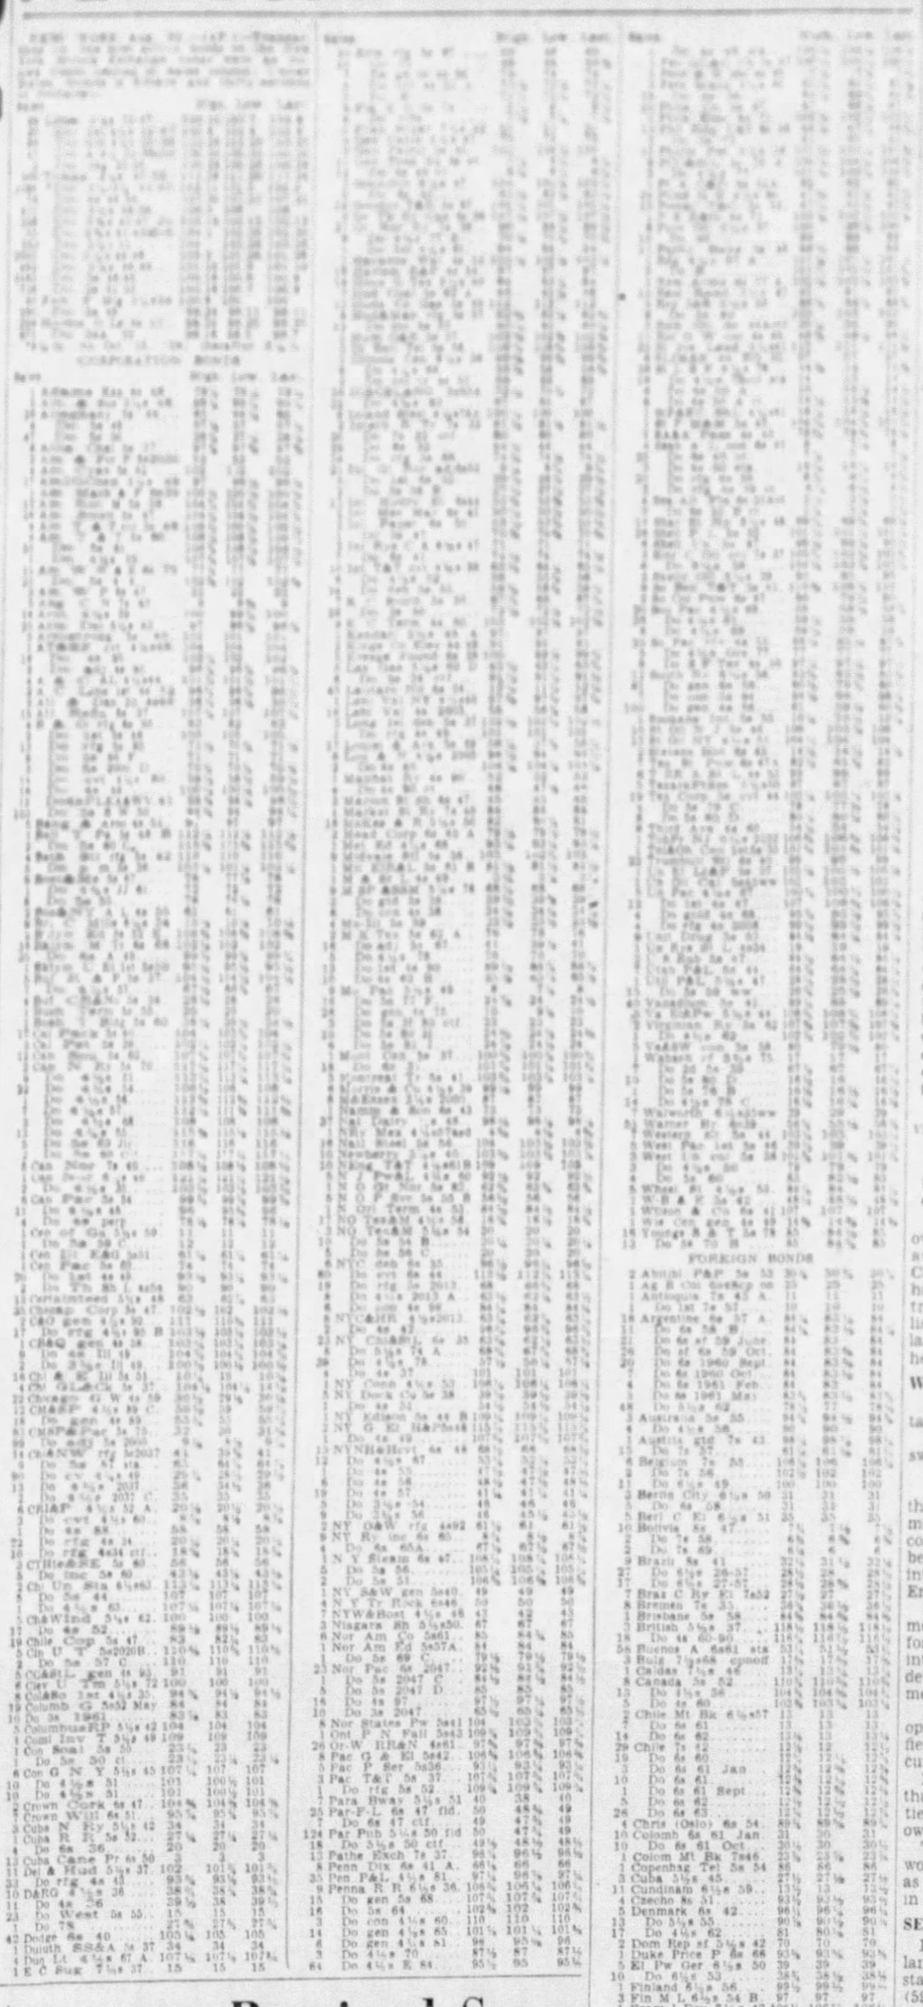
NEW YORK BOND MARKET



FOREIGN BONDS

BRITISH LOOK FOR RECOVERY IN AMERICA

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The following people in England are looking beyond the short cycle which has occurred in business there.

They want to know what lies ahead, if possible.

Here is the observation of a very competent, unbiased and capable London financier:

"While the government and others proclaim continued improvement in British conditions, my own personal view is that the upturn has gone just about far enough. The whole scheming today in England just as in the United States is an intermingling of social and economic elements.

"In England the transition was more gradual. In the United States you went at it suddenly.

"On the theory that stimulus furnished by depreciation of the pound is of temporary nature, and on the undoubted fact that improvement in internal trade has been very largely due to the sudden changeover from a free trade to a tariff policy, furnishing us all with a lot of additional washing to take in from each other, I now believe that England is already over the peak of this movement.

"I may be wrong, but with all due allowance to the undoubted and continued expansion in British empire trade, I believe that this country has got as far on the upswing as she can get on her own momentum, and that whether she goes up or back from now on depends upon whether international trade ceases to contract and starts to expand again in the near future."

This is far from an isolated view in London financial circles.

The thinking Englishman asks:

"From where is the stimulus for major betterment to this country to come?"

England's great markets, her own colonies, have rapidly drifted away from the mother country. Canada, Australia, South Africa have all developed home industries and thus have been establishing their independence of England. India has greatly curtailed her purchases from England.

WATCH UNITED STATES

Where, then, can England obtain stimulation?

A great many Englishmen answer:

"The United States."

They believe, in other words, that England must await improvement in United States economic conditions. The sequence, they believe, will be improvement in international commerce, in which England will obtain her share.

But the important thing to remember is that such improvement for England cannot be generated internally; it must await external developments, especially betterment in the United States.

Another bit of support to my opinion, that I find myself satisfied with the dollar over foreign currencies:

In London I frequently was told that they prefer American securities for investment above their own.

Their only fear was that we would tinker with the dollar so as to cause it to depreciate further in value.

SEES FUTURE

I am convinced that once England becomes reconciled to the stability of the dollar at its new (59.06 cents of the old dollar) value, a great deal of English capital will flow this way.

The Englishman, despite his horrors of the experimentation which our government is carrying on, seems to feel that the United States must pull out of the depression. Its natural resources, affording boundless opportunities for inherent improvement and expansion, bulk up hugely in the Englishman's calculations of our prospects.

Why, then, should the American prefer a foreign currency to his own, when the foreigners themselves would like to come into our markets to employ their idle funds?

Auto Financing Gains Over 1933

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—On a daily basis, the dollar-volume of retail financing of new passenger automobiles showed an increase of 50 per cent during July as compared with a year ago and an increase of 169 per cent compared with July, 1932, according to preliminary estimates by the Commerce Department. Compared with June there was a decrease of about 3 per cent.

Zenith Dealers Meet at Schenley

About 300 Zenith dealers were guests of the Pittsburgh Auto Equipment Company at the Schenley Hotel last night at a showing of the new Zenith radio line. James Calloway, sales manager, was in charge of the meeting and told of sales plans for this fall. Harry Smith, secretary and treasurer of the Pittsburgh Auto Equipment Company, welcomed the dealers.

Aluminum Company Buys Lumber Unit

Aluminum Company of America and the Chicago Bridge and Iron Works have acquired a substantial stock interest in American Lumber and Treating Company. Their holdings together amount to a majority of the stock outstanding.

Board of Trade Seat Drops $600

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—A membership on the Chicago Board of Trade sold today at $7,200 net to the buyer, a drop of $600 from the previous sale.

Autumn Revival Seen For District

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

CORPORATION HEADS in the Pittsburgh district are quite confident that a revival in activity will take place in the latter part of September and early October, just how great this revival is to be, however, will depend on factors which make estimates uncertain.

Mr. Snyder

The steel industry owed a major share of its activity in the second quarter to demand from the automobile industry. Automobile sales have been tapering off in line with seasonal precedents. Some makers are planning new models. The motor car builders are taking little steel at present but this is due to the fact that they bought in advance during the second quarter in anticipation of higher prices. Most of these stocks will be used within a short time. This will mean that buying of steel at Detroit will reflect actual consumption quite closely in the latter months of the year. The automobile industry may be expected to take more steel than at present but the actual volume will depend on the retail demand for cars.

At present steel mill activity in the Pittsburgh district is at about 15 per cent of capacity. This is lower than the rate for the industry as a whole which is at about 21 per cent.

Building Affects Steel Production

BUILDING HAS NOT contributed heavily to steel activity this year except where government construction projects were concerned. At present, work of this kind is keeping structural plants operating at a relatively high rate. The vast federal plan for extending credit to home owners for repairs and modernization will not be likely to help the steel trade to any great extent since work of this kind on small buildings rarely involves the use of much steel.

High hopes were expressed for railroad buying of steel early this year but actual results have been disappointing. Mills are completing rail orders and the roads will take little additional tonnage this year. The railroads started building and buying rolling stock early in the year but there have been few additions to business of this kind.

Glass Prospects Found Uncertain

THE PLATE GLASS industry is dependent upon the automobile trade for a major share of its business and will be influenced by the same factors affecting steel. The other big market for plate glass is in building but there is little activity in structures which would use this material.

The window glass makers are dependent almost entirely on the construction of homes and small buildings for their sales. The Federal housing program may be expected to help this industry.

Makers of bottled and glass tableware enjoyed boom on the return of liquor but this demand, while still large, has tended to decline recently.

Coal Trade Sees Hope

THE COAL TRADE has been on the doldrums throughout the summer. Industrial demand has been slow, reflecting general conditions. Any revival in industrial activity would stimulate coal production and, addition, the autumn always brings demand for residential sizes. Coal production invariably picks up in September and October.

Several of Pittsburgh's other industries have been enjoying a substantial but not sensational improvement in orders. Westinghouse Electric is busier. Blaw-Knox, which makes a wide range of products, including road building and grading machinery, concrete forms, welded steel tanks and rolling mill rolls, reports a general improvement in most of its departments. Both of the leading makers of heavy steel mill equipment have booked large orders which will keep them fairly busy for the balance of the year.

BLOC CONTROLS WORLD TIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The House Foreign Affairs Committee was told by State Department officials yesterday that, although the United States consumed more than 50 per cent of the world's tin output, the industry was dominated by an international agreement in which this country had no voice.

As a result, Roy Veatch, a State Department economic advisor, said the foreign countries producing the metal had boosted the price to American consumers 100 per cent in the last two years.

Veatch, testifying at a preliminary hearing in the committee's investigation of tin supplies, said in the event of war this country would have less than two months' supply of virgin tin to be used for the manufacture of munitions, motors and for its canning industry.

CAPTAIN MIDNIGHT -:- By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

It is said that he has come under the royal displeasure; that he was too much a favorite of La Pompadour, and, oh, so many things. He is to remain in Quebec—an exile."

'Notorious Scoundrel

"The Old France could well spare him, no doubt," said Yvonne coldly. "But the New can ill afford to add another scoundrel to the many it has. Why, this man is notorious—a rake, a profligate of the worst order. To be sure, that will be a strong recommendation for him here—but it is a pity."

"They say he is very charming, very handsome . . ."

"So was Lucifer," said Yvonne pertly. "He is reputed to have since become so ugly that mothers awe their naughty children with his name and that of Captain Midnight. Please, dear Paul, no more of your gossip. 'Twas a perfect night until you came."

"Oh, very well!" Paul feigned anger and bowed low to her. "I shall leave you to the moon and stars and the song of the night wind, Mlle. Yvonne."

"Paul—before you go, promise me there will be no gaming this night—not with Simon Girard; not with any one. Tell me you will come home early."

Paul's anger this time was hardly feigned. He acted like the peevish, spoiled youth he was.

* * *

"You forget you are my sister—not my guardian. I shall gamble if I wish, and if I finish not before dawn, at dawn will I come home. Pish! Leading strings you would keep upon me—"

Thoughts Not Pleasant

He turned abruptly, rudely, and left her. She started to follow him, stretched forth a hand [illegible] Captain him, shrugged [illegible] and again resumed [illegible] which union with the night. Da. 10:10

Her thoughts were not so pleasant now. Paul had made her unhappy. Gossip ever disturbed her. For Captain Midnight, his black mask and cloak, black tricornered hat and menacing pistols; she cared little; but she despised such men as Jean Pierre Martel—royal lapdogs; and she feared for Paul when he played cards with the young bloods of the colony, and with some not so young, like Simon Girard. Paul usually lost money. He came home sodden with wine, unruly and sullen. Yvonne knew him better than he knew himself; he played with fire in this wild life he led.

And it was Simon Girard's influence that spoiled him—Simon Girard who whispered two words of evil to him for every one that she spoke of good. A man full 15 years his senior and the one to whom as his lawyer, their dead father had intrusted the management of their fortune. Yvonne's own quick temper flared against Girard. She disliked him—for the way he led Paul about from one excess to another; for the way his small, slate-gray eyes sometimes looked at her, seeming to say, "You are weak, helpless as a dove; I am strong, swift and merciless as a falcon. Some day . . ."

Doesn't Fear Him

"That day will never come!" she said hotly. "I do not fear him. . . ."

She had spoken aloud. The sound of her voice aroused her to her surroundings. Instinctively aware of another's presence, she turned. Even in the moonlight and shadow the newcomer saw her frown with dark displeasure, the proud stiffening of her slender form. With barely a nod, she acknowledged his salutation.

"Your servant, Madamoiselle Yvonne," murmured Simon Girard. "It seems a cloud has crossed the moon, throwing a shadow over your lovely face. I should not like to think that I had made the shadow—on such a pleasant night as this."

Girard's face was thin, his lips tight-drawn, so that when he smiled there was something wolfish about him, something that made Yvonne shudder and draw back from him.

"I would not detain you, m'sieu," said Yvonne. "It is a pleasant night."

"It still is, I think," he said, ruffled by her aloofness. "Yes, I insist it is—a night made for love, for the thrill of a kiss, of heart beating to heart—your heart and mine—"

"Enough!" she said sharply. "I will not listen to such talk from you. Love would be a lie on your lips. You know I detest you, sir, for what you have tried to make of my brother. You have sought to debauch him, to make him like yourself and the Sybarites who rule here—"

Warns Yvonne

"Careful!" interrupted Girard, in his voice a grating note of menace. "You are rash with your tongue, Yvonne. It is I who shall talk. I have loved you long before this, have asked you in marriage. I ask you once more, but this time I tell you if you refuse you will regret it—"

"How regret it? I do not care for you . . ."

"But for Paul—petit Paul—your dear young brother—you care—even more than for yourself. I shall not mince matters—he is many thousands in debt—"

"We can pay" returned Yvonne bitterly. So Paul had let himself fall into the talons of these vultures. "We are not poor."

"As your lawyer it is my place to advise that your money is in trust. So much each year you may have from it. But that is beside the point, which is this: Your brother has stolen, in order to pay his debts, from the royal treasury. He has taken advantage of his position to play the thief—"

"You lie!"

"What use is it to lie?" he demanded reasonably, in a tone that convinced her he spoke the truth. "You could readily disprove it, if I lied. It is the truth. Paul thinks to make up the amount stolen. He does not know he has been found out. If the story reaches the intendant's ears—" Girard made with outspread, upturned hands a gesture of finality. "Disgrace, certainly; perhaps imprisonment, perhaps worse. Ask Paul if this is not so. And ponder in the meantime how advantageous it would be for you to marry me. As Paul Caron, he means little to me; as the brother of my wife—"

Takes Hurried Leave

He saw by the fierce light in her eyes, the furious clenching of her small hands and the rigidity of her body that it were well to say no more. Mockingly, hurriedly, he took his leave, with these parting words: "Think well."

Yvonne knew her helplessness now. Girard was only one among many men in this place who would stoop even lower than he to gain their ends. She could not fight him alone; refuse him and Paul's disgrace would be certain. Paul—a weakling, a thief—his life and career ruined and hers, too, perhaps; for she would go where he went—to oblivion, to ignominy. Either that or—the memory of Simon Girard's lupine visage repelled her. To give herself to him, into his unclean embrace—

Some sixth sense warned her; there was some one. Sure enough, out of the deeper shadow flung by the bastion a man stepped forth. He was taller than Paul, broader than Simon Girard. He looked like one who had fought hard in war, not merely played at fighting as Paul and so many others here had done.

STEEL OUTPUT DECREASES FURTHER

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—With the last month of the third quarter approaching, no signs of improvement in steel and allied industries have appeared, according to the Iron Age.

"Widespread concern over Federal policies, particularly as they relate to money and labor, undoubtedly has played a large part in holding back industrial enterprise, with the result that consumer stocks of material accumulated in June are lasting longer than had been expected. Nevertheless it is difficult to believe that consumption of iron and steel has fallen as sharply as production, and it is therefore believed that September, which will mark the end of the vacation season, will usher in some measure of improvement in buying.

AUTOS BUY

Automotive releases of sheets and strips have increased moderately at Cleveland and Chicago, where ingot production has risen three points to 13 per cent and one point to 30 per cent, respectively. But buying by the motor car industry is developing much more slowly than had originally been expected. It is becoming increasingly clear that automobile makers are in no hurry to bring out new models. The January exhibition in New York is no longer a national affair sponsored by the Automobile Chamber of Commerce and hence has lost its significance as a final date for getting new lines into production. Nervousness over the future course of the national administration and uncertainty as to what the impending renewal of the automobile code will mean in terms of costs are also factors conducive to caution.

Aside from the slight upturn in automobile takings of steel, the trend of bookings has been toward lower levels. Ingot production has declined three points to 31 per cent at Pittsburgh, four points to 18 per cent in the valleys and three point sto 24 per cent in the Wheeling district, remaining unchanged at other producing centers. The national average has dropped from 22 to 21 per cent of capacity, the lowest rate of the year, reached only once before, in the first week of July.

SEES NO GAIN

No marked rebound is in immediate prospect. Heavy tonnage business from the railroads is being completed and new public works projects are likely to be slow in reaching the contracting stage. The principal dependence of the mills for some time to come, it is believed, will be business in the lighter-rolled products. Sufficient volume to compensate for late reductions in prices has not been forthcoming and the market situation is not such as to permit fresh advances. Prices thus far filed for fourth quarter on both finished steel and pig iron indicate that present quotations will be reaffirmed. At those levels, however, a continued dearth of tonnage is likely to draw attention to the industry's cost burden which has been materially increased by wage advances under the code.

TREASURY GETS SILVER

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Transfers of silver to the United States under the nationalization order through August 17 amounted to 33,465,091 ounces, Secretary Morgenthau announced.

Holders of bullion silver which was in the United States June 12 have 90 days from August 9 in which to return it to the Treasury.

Newly-mined silver turned in for the week ending August 17 amounted to 649,757 ounces.

The Treasury bought $1,250,000 in government securities for investment accounts last week. Morgenthau said that about $22,000,000 in HOLC bonds purchased for the account of postal savings at 99 had been sold to the banks for 100. This was in an issue of $150,000,999, a portion of which was taken by the Treasury because of unsatisfactory prices. Morgenthau said postal savings would take the profit.

Hog Market Rises For Nineteenth Day

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The hog market showed a further burst of strength in the nineteenth day of advance to rule 25 cents and more above Tuesday's average and to set a practical top of $7.15. An extreme top on two small lots of good quality brought $7.25, both the best levels since August, 1931. Better grade of swine of 200 pounds and over brought $7 to $7.15.

Forbes

Without Love, Muzzle Wallace, Build Merchant Marine, Author Tours U. S.

By B. C. FORBES

FOREIGNERS do not love us.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT should either muzzle Secretary Wallace, or send him on a tour of American countries. Any American visiting Europe with his eyes, mind and ears open would as soon commit suicide as advocate the grave impairment of America's ability to safeguard her shores.

Mr. Forbes

Wipe out an efficient fleet of American passenger-and-cargo ships, and our Navy, no matter how powerful in itself, would be fatally handicapped.

Secretary Wallace, land-bred, apparently is unaware that maritime greatness all through civilized history has been an accompaniment of national greatness.

The Kaiser gloried in building up his navy. While "Britannia ruled the waves" Britain was the most powerful nation in the world.

Note how assiduously Japan has been strengthening her naval armament, how zealously Mussolini has sought to impress the world with his sea and air fleets, and how each leading nation has been maneuvering to guard against any impairment of its naval standing.

If there ever was a time when the United States should encourage the development of a highly efficient merchant marine, it is today. Visit Glasgow and you hear even the ordinary shipyard worker talk of the "secret" provisions made on modern passenger ships for transforming them into armed vessels overnight, should need arise.

Other countries are taking similar precautions.

Rob our Navy of an auxiliary fleet of supply and other ships, and it would be almost in the position of an army without a commissariat.

No! Develop, not destroy, our mercantile marine!

THE TRAVELER in Europe is amused and amazed at the familiarity of the people with American slang and characteristically American colloquialisms. Many of them also talk affectionately of heroes and heroines of our better-known comic strips.

American products have also overrun Europe more notably than ever before. Why, in an out-of-the-way corner of Northern Scotland I noticed that the lone typewriter in the hotel office was of a well-known American make.

When I was a lad in the backwoods of Scotland "conversational lozenges" were all the rage—flat, hard candies bearing such declarations as "I love you," "Won't you be mine?" "Name the day," "Give me a kiss," and other bald protestations and invitations. They were much used by bashful rustic swains.

The English author of "In Scotland Again," describing a tour through that country, visited the only factory where these "sweeties" are manufactured. After seeing how the aforementioned product was made, he added:

"In the next room I discovered another kind of sweet—precisely the same in essentials—but absolutely different in its attitude towards life. They said: 'Say, kid, I like your style,' 'Gee, but you're some baby,' 'You're some jazz hound,' 'You're a regular fellow.' 'These sweets,' I was told, 'we call "Cupid's Whispers." They are only popular in towns which have cinemas (movies).'

"'In other words, towns which can translate them?'

"'Yes.'

"What a strange contrast! In one room thousands of sweets were being made which would have conveyed a tender message to our great-grandmothers, while next door the machines rattle out Americanized triteness for an entirely new generation."

This will give you an insight into how deeply American movies have entered into the lives of the rest of the world.

Incidentally, Britain is waging a most influential campaign against the inroads of American pictures and for the development of British productions. I read in the London newspapers an interview with a high executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer who announced that his company was actively preparing to build large first-class studios in Britain, to employ British in addition to American stars.

LET AMERICA vigilantly increase not vitiate her strength.

Insolvency Index Drops to Low Point

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Dun's insolvency index for the first half of August today stood at 54.2, the lowest for any two weeks period this year. In August, 1933, the index was 89.1 and 160.1 in 1932.

Auto Sales in July Ahead of Last Year

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—July factory sales of automobiles manufactured in the United States totaled 266,575 vehicles compared to 208,065 in June and 229,397 in July, 1933, the Census Bureau reports.

RETURN OF WALL STREET OPTIMISM BUOYS STOCKS

SHARES CLIMB AS TRADING EXPANDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—There was a revival of optimism in the stock market today without any especially important news developments to account for the change in sentiment.

Following yesterday's slow, but substantial, advance, leading issues opened quietly. In the second hour, however, there was a buying flurry that sent prices up 1 to about 3 points and caused the ticker tape to drop behind floor transactions. While the spurt lasted for only a few minutes, advances were fairly well maintained.

In the board rooms there was an inclination to attribute the reversal to recurrent thoughts of inflation, although the usually responsive metals did not follow the general upturn and other equities of the non-inflation type were exceptionally firm.

The inflationary theorists were aided by heaviness of the dollar in terms of leading gold currencies. At the same time wheat eased and the other cereals were hesitant. Cotton reacted in the face of the administration's 12-cent lending peg. United States government securities steadied, but other bond groups were erratic.

Hogs at Chicago jumped to another new peak since 1931. Most traders were undecided as to whether the government's new cotton loan plan was bullish or bearish. Some buying in the rail stocks was attributed to expectations that Washington would ultimately "do something" for the carriers.

The book of Maj. Angas, British economic writer, published here yesterday, predicted an inflationary boom in America, continued the subject of much discussion and "wishful thinking" in brokerage circles. Just how much of the increased activity in stocks was due to the digestion by traders of the prophetic brochure was a matter of argument.

In some financial quarters it was pointed out that there was nothing particularly new in the Major's prognostications, inasmuch as various commission house commentators for some time have been calling attention to the potentialities inherent in the country's huge excess bank reserves and the drastic growth of government spending.

A number of market letter writers, while not ignoring the long-term possibilities of currency as well as credit expansion, were inclined to express cautious views regarding the immediate response of stocks to such influences. Retarding factors were seen in uncertainties surrounding labor difficulties, taxation, consumer resistance to higher prices and foreign problems.

POWER OUTPUT INCREASE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Electric power output last week totaled 1,674,345,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,659,043,000 kilowatt hours for the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 1.5 per cent, against an increase of 1.9 per cent the week before.

The New England States showed a decrease of 7.0 per cent from 1933 against a decrease of 5.9 per cent the previous week; the Rocky Mountain States reported a decrease of 8.2 per cent against a decrease of 3.7 per cent the week before; while the central industrial states had a gain of 1.1 per cent compared with a decrease of 0.3 per cent the past week.

Regional gains from 1933 for last week were:

Middle Atlantic, 3.8 per cent, against a rise of 1.7 per cent the week before; West Central, 12.3, against 11.5; Southern States, 1.9 against 1.3; Pacific Coast, 5.4 against 8.1.

WHEAT GROUP POSTPONES

LONDON, Aug. 22. — (AP.) — A final session of the international wheat conference was postponed today until tomorrow to give certain delegates time to cable their governments for instructions.

A series of general proposals is up for final approval before being submitted to the 21 nations who signed the 1934 wheat pact. Copies of sub-committee reports were circulated among delegates last night and this morning.

Dr. Rodolfo Garcia Arias, Argentine delegate, was understood to be one who wished to ask his government for instructions. The conference failed to reach agreements on two principal issues—export quotas for 1934-35 and additional acreage reduction.

Y., in accordance with a trust agreement with the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, trustee, will redeem September 1 1934, at the office of the Union Trust Company, all of the outstanding seriel 5¾ per cent debenture gold coupon bonds of the Carbon Company at face plus accrued interest together with a premium of 2½ per cent.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

DOLLAR DROPS AT LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The United States dollar opened easy today at 5.09 to the pound, down ⅜ cent from the overnight rate, and remained at that figure in early trading.

The French franc was firmer, opening at 76.12 to the pound, as against an overnight rate of 76.25.

Bar gold advanced 4½ pence to 138s 7d. (United States equivalent $35.27 on basis of sterling at $5.09.)

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The American dollar slipped back from the Paris gold point today, opening at 14.965 francs (6.682 cents to the franc) and weakening to 14.94 francs (6.693 cents) by noon. The overnight rate was 14.99 francs (6.67 cents).

Bankers attributed the weakness to renewed reports from New York or the possibility of inflation. No gold shipments were likely at this point, but are expected if the rate goes lower.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The United States dollar sold today at 2.482 marks (40.29 cents to the mark) as compared with yesterday's price of 2.488 marks (40.15 cents).

COTTON LOAN TO PROTECT GROWERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The 12-cent "bottom" which President Roosevelt has placed under king cotton was described today as a move to permit the South to market its staple in orderly fashion.

Farmers will not have to sell at low prices should the quotations drop in the near future, officials said.

Several factors prompted the administration to announce late yesterday that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, through the Commodity Credit Corporation would increase its lending from 10 to 12 cents a pound on cotton, low middling or better.

FEAR STRIKE

One is a threat of a widespread strike in cotton mills, which would tend to diminish the demand for the staple. There also has been a drop in consumption this year, compared to past years.

If a grower decides against selling his cotton now, he can borrow 12 cents a pound on it from the government. The regulations are expected to follow closely those issued last year, when the government lent 10 cents a pound.

If that is the case, the grower can keep his cotton over any period of price dips, then sell it, repay the loan and pocket the profit. If cotton should go below 12 cents and stay below, the government would face a loss.

PEGS AT 13 CENTS

The market price now is more than 13 cents a pound. The President's action, in effect, pegs it at a minimum of 12 cents. Officials said privately they expected cotton to sell for 13 cents or more after the textile labor situation is straightened out.

It is the view in official circles that no immediate action will be taken to make similar loans on wheat and cotton, although such proposals have been made.

The President said the Commodity Credit Corporation was still carrying for cotton producers about 1,000,000 bales of last year's crop and that the cotton producers' pool has approximately 2,000,000 bales additional. He said:

"It is worth noting that the still large surplus of cotton will, in all probability, show this year a reduction of about 4,500,000 bales from last year.

Truscon Seen In Republic Merger

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Unconfirmed reports that a merger of the Truscon Steel Company and the Republic Steel Corporation is being negotiated were circulated in financial circles here today.

Julius Kahn, president of Truscon, refused to deny or confirm the reports.

Kahn was then in conference with officials of Republic Steel.

Although Republic has been engaged in preliminary work on a proposed merger with the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company, of Cleveland, for several weeks, today's was the first intimation that any deal with Truscon was being considered.

Truscon, a $14,500,000 concern, is a maker of light finished steel products. It has plants in Cleveland, Youngstown, and Detroit, and owns large interests in the Truscon Steel Company, of Canada, and the Japan Steel Products Company, of Japan.

Court Completes Fisk Receivership

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Federal Judge H. D. McLellan has granted a petition authorizing final disposition of the assets of the old Fisk Rubber Company, the petition having been filed by Attorney J. T. Noonan, counsel for the Chase National Bank, of New York, which originally as trustee brought the petition for an equity receivership.

There remain to be distributed some $778,200 of assets among the bondholders, noteholders and other creditors. This will have the effect of virtually winding up the Fisk Rubber receivership.

DISTRICTS SET DIRECT LOAN CHARGES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Established industrial and commercial enterprises will pay from 4 to 6 per cent on direct loans from the Federal Reserve banks.

This became known with a schedule of rates published by the Federal Reserve Board which has been approved for the regional institutions.

The banks at Boston, New York and Philadelphia asked approval of rates ranging from 4 to 6 per cent, dependent on the element of risk, which were granted by the board, while Chicago, San Francisco and Dallas sought a range of between 5 and 6 per cent. St. Louis asked for a 5½ per cent rate. All other institutions specified 6 per cent. All requests were granted.

RATES VARY

Various rates were approved in cases where a private lending agency collaborates with the reserve banks in making loans. For instance, in Boston and New York a 3 per cent rate was sanctioned, and in San Francisco a range of from 3 to 4 per cent was granted. Cleveland, Kansas City and Dallas were granted 4 per cent rates. St. Louis 4½ per cent; Minneapolis, from 4½ to 5; Atlanta, 5 per cent; Chicago, from 5 to 6; Philadelphia, 1 per cent above the prevailing discount rate, and Richmond, 6 per cent for non-banking financial institutions, and 1 per cent below the rate charged industrial or commercial borrowers for banking institutions, but not less than 4 per cent.

LOWER INTEREST

In cases where commitments to make advances are made by the Federal Reserve Banks, rates will be charged from a minimum of one-half of one per cent to a range of from 1 to 2 per cent. This applies, officials of the board said, where industries make arrangements for loans which are exercisable for a fixed period. In other words, the loan "is there if they want it."

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 14, 1934.
SEPARATE and sealed proposals will be received at the office of the County Controller of Allegheny County until 11:00 o'clock a. m., (eastern standard time), 12:00 o'clock noon (daylight saving time), Tuesday, August 28, 1934, and will be opened by the County Commissioners for the following:
Tar and Road Construction.
Specifications, form of contract, instructions to bidders and proposal may be viewed at the office of the Commissioners of Allegheny County.
Copies of the above data for use of bidders will be furnished upon application to the contract clerk in the Department of Highways, Bridges and Tunnels of Allegheny County, Room 303, County Office Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Proposals must be accompanied by a certified check or surety company bond for the amount fixed in the "Instructions to Bidders" as evidence that the bidder will accept and carry out the conditions of the contract in case of award.
The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.
ROBERT G. WOODSIDE,
County Controller,
Allegheny County.

OFFICIAL—PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., August 21, 1934.
Separate and sealed proposals will be received at the office of the City Controller, First Floor, City-County Building, until 10 o'clock a. m., eastern standard time, Thursday, September 6, 1934, and will be publicly opened and read one hour later in the City Council Chamber for the construction of an incinerator plant on city owned property adjacent to the Brilliant Pumping Station and for the construction of an incinerator plant in the Twenty-first Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, and providing for the equipment in connection with the same.
Specifications, addenda to specifications, plans and blank proposals can be obtained at the City Architect's Office, 501-A, City-County Building. Contractors will be required to deposit a certified check in the sum of $50.00, made payable to the Treasurer, City of Pittsburgh, for each set of plans and specifications, which check will be returned upon the return of the plans and specifications to the City Architect's Office.
Each proposal must be accompanied by a bond in the sum of ... per cent of the estimated cost of the ... bond shall be of a surety company ... and shall be complied with the city ordinance in reference to furnishing bonds ...
Bidder's attention is directed ... provision of the contract requiring a ... bond indemnifying labor and material ... bility, which shall be given by the successful bidder when contract is executed and the bond indemnifying labor and material shall be given in the sum of 50 per cent of the amount of the successful bidder's contract.
Bidders are notified herewith that the acceptance of bids or the award of the contract for Plant "A" is contingent upon the city acquiring the site for Plant "A," located in the Twenty-first Ward of the City of Pittsburgh.
The city reserves the right to award the contract or both, as may be to the best interest of the City of Pittsburgh.
The Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Health reserve the right to reject any or all bids submitted or accept any proposal if they deem it to be for the interest of the City of Pittsburgh so to do.
WILLIAM N. McNAIR, Mayor.
DR. RAY P. MOYER, Director.

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XXIX.

"Briefly," said Linda, "you want a man as much like yourself as is humanly possible."

He gave her a quizzical look. "How did you guess?"

"Call it female intuition. You have just described Jerome, Dr. Van Dieman."

"Jerome?"

Yes, Lieut. Cram. Ever since we landed on this island I've been playing Eve. But I couldn't make him play up to me as Adam. He wouldn't break into your beautiful chests and he wouldn't sample the Forbidden Fruit. I had to trick him into doing that . . ."

"I'll tell you about it later. What you have said is more important just now—to you as well as to us."

"What I just said . . ."

"About wanting a man to replace you, while you're in Holland. Jerome can do that. He has all points Spanish and everything. He was a gentleman by nature and birth and tradition long before they made him an officer and a gentleman by Act of Congress. If he hadn't been, we'd be just another Adam and Eve. But he wouldn't fall for any Garden of Eden because we had nowhere to go from there."

Dr. Van Dieman looked puzzled. "I do not understand. It is natural that you two should have fallen in love, living here so intimately. It is also natural that since you are well bred young people you should have desired to preserve your self-respect. But I do not see what you mean by saying that this young man protected you both from temptation because there was no place for you to go from here."

Just Common Sense

Linda said with the candor of the modern girl: "Jerome turned down the Garden of Eden idea because we can't marry when we go back where we belong."

"Zo . . . and why not?"

"Because both our fortunes have stopped being that thing," Linda said. "The good old dividends are washed out. We're both flat. He had resigned his Navy commission last year to start a boat-building business. Now he is a gentleman of leisure. Leisure is all he's got."

"Ach . . . now I begin to understand. How noble . . ."

"Gosh, Doctor, don't call it that!" Jerome said disgustedly. "It was just plain common sense."

"You are right, my boy. Just plain common sense. If there is anything more noble than plain common sense you stick to in face of great temptation, then I have still to find it out."

Dr. Van Dieman's pure English was enriching itself a little under stress of his very human emotion. He stroked his silvery beard. "Now I see it all. Let us go aboard and breakfast. Then we can talk. You have been such good children. You have been much better as Adam and Eve. And now I think maybe I shall be a sort of agent of God."

He seemed to be turning this idea in his mind, as if weighing any possible charge of blasphemy. Then he said: "Why not? In the life of every man he is given some time a chance to be that . . . All that is any good in any man is that part of him which is a part of God." He nodded to himself. "Which is all the more reason for giving the God that is in us a good time, when it can be done honestly."

"That's the trouble," Linda said.

Needs Manager

"Well then, we shall see. I ought to be sailing on the next of our vessels for Rotterdam. All that keeps me is this matter of finding the right man to replace me . . . permanently, if he makes good. As I have said, it is a case of finding a square peg for a square hole, but not one that fits too snugly for a little play.

"Now put away the wedding dress, my dear, and see what you can find in the way of clothes . . . no, you may put the wedding dress in a valise you will find there in the closet and bring it with you. It has never been worn . . . but that is something I am not yet ready to talk about even after 40 years. Perhaps you may soon wear it happily, and then I shall tell you. Close the house as you found it and come down to the beach and we shall get under weigh for San Cristobal."

He went out and started back toward the ravine. Jerome and Linda looked after him, then at each other.

"This," said Jerome, "is my idea of a good conduct bonus cashed ahead of time and the discount waived."

"And that," said Linda, looking after the big white figure, radiant in the morning sunlight, "is my idea of God in human form."

The big macaw had fluttered after the later. Then, as if resenting his departure to leave these aliens on the property, it flew back to its branch. "Well, what in blazes do you want?" it screeched.

"Get a new line, Cocky," Jerome advised. "There's nothing in the hot place you squawk about that interests us in the least. What we want is right here—in heaven."

Return to Eden

Ten days later the new Pan-Caribbean Agent General of the Van Dieman Lines said to the captain of the smart cabin cruiser:

"You are to set the Senora and myself ashore, Mateo, and return for us in a week. Then we shall go to the port of your sainted namesake and take up our official duties as per order of Doctor Van Dieman."

"But Senor," Mateo protested, "you and the Senora should have at least a cook."

"No, amigo mio, we prefer to be entirely alone. If we bore each other there are always the gorillas."

Mateo crossed himself. "They are not Christians, Senor . . ."

"How do you know, Mateo?" Linda asked. She had not yet changed the wedding dress in which she had gone directly from the church to the yacht, about five hours earlier in the day, at Santa Cristobal. "Perhaps they are simply in disguise."

Again the yacht captain crossed himself. "For Dios, Senora, let us in that case the disguise at least is good. Still it is possible. Do they not guard the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil? But such things are not for me to talk about."

Jerome and Linda stepped ashore. The boat shoved off the beach and went back to the smart express-cruiser. She blew three blasts in salute, dipped her colors, and headed for the port of Santa Mateo.

Jerome picked up a suitcase and started across the beach for the mouth of the ravine. Linda walked beside him. As they entered the cool shaded tunnel of the trees she stopped.

"Wait a moment, Jerry. I can't risk tearing this lovely thing."

Takes Off Gown

She slipped out of the priceless lace wedding dress, folded it carefully over her arm, then said, "All right, let's go. Now I'm back where I belong."

"You're where you belong," he agreed, "but not back there. It's for the first time. In all your hitherto questing life."

"But I've always belonged to you, Jerry."

"True, but the title was only signed, sealed and delivered this morning in San Mateo. Dr. Van Dieman was right. I could never have graduated from the intensive course he's put me through in the past 10 days if we'd been married on landing."

"No," she admitted. "You'd have been what my college psychology 'prof' called a split consciousness."

"Yes, and it would have just about torn me in two. Now I've got a whole week with nothing to think about but you. Then we'll go aboard the cruiser and start on a Caribbean cruise that will be about as much like the one we took aboard Tommy's yacht as working in a vineyard is like enjoying the champagne it produces."

She said happily: "Back again in Eden, with the Lord's permission to eat all of the fruit of the tree we want. And when I say the Lord, I don't mean Dr. Van Dieman, though we have his, too."

"That," said Jerome, "is probably what was meant for Adam and Eve if they'd obeyed the Law."

"You're to thank for that, Jerry. All the same it seems odd that so much should depend on signing our names to a paper before the U. S. Consul. And afterwards, watching Tommy and his crowd lapping up champagne."

"Tommy did his job of giving you away like a gentleman and sportsman. Never thought the old stock market pirate had so much Lord Chesterfield about him."

Welcomed by Apes

Linda was listening but not to this eulogy of Tommy. Her head was aslant and as Jerome stopped speaking he heard from somewhere back in the jungle the cry that had appalled them when first it had struck on their startled ears.

"They know we're back," Linda said, "but somehow the Racketeer's yell sounds differently."

"It is different," said Jerome. "All the cussedness gone out of it. More like a welcome."

"It is a welcome. The poor things have missed us. And they're pleased to have us back. Fancy, Jerry, being welcomed on your honeymoon by a family of gorillas!"

"And liking it. All the same, I think we'd still better leave the Forbidden Fruit alone."

"Well, perhaps," she admitted. "All I really wanted was to see what it was like."

"We've done that thing. And you know what the Big Chief told us about its properties. According to the tribe of natives where he found it . . ."

"We'll find out about that, too," she laughed and started to splash up the bed of the brook. They came to the natural dam. As they mounted it a voice that seemed now, like that of the Racketeer, to have lost its unpleasant hostility cried jovially:

"Well, what in blazes do you want?"

"What do you think, Cocky?" Linda cried.

STARS AND STRIPES

And many demanding a "square deal" would be satisfied with a "square meal."

Young John Jacob Astor is proving how easy it is for a multi-millionaire and his bride to live on $8,000 a year if you don't try it.

Discussing the weather, a gent from Georgia remarks: "It wouldn't be so bad if we jes' had a little more humanity and a little less humidity."

Prof. Beebe now claims to hold the world's record for going down to the bottom of the sea. It was previously held by an Irishman named McGinty.

The nearest thing we know to a punk,
Carries a "uke" that goes "plunkety-plunk."

And—boy, oh boy, is that guy a pest?

Junior Patrol Mail Box

This week's contest ends tomorrow midnight, fellows!

Which would you rather have your picture taken . . . ?

Well, we have received a fine bunch of letters, and every one of them seems to hold a good idea about this subject. This is just about your last chance today, fellows, but we hope every Junior Patrol member will write a letter today. If you mail it tonight, it will get here on time. Prizes are $2.50 first, $1.50 second and $1 third.

Now here is another one of last week's contest letters. It's from William Rea, of 415 Second street, Donora, Pa.

He says:

"Here is my idea about 'Washing My Neck and Ears.' When I wash my neck I don't know whether it's clean or not. I usually have to take a brush and brush it. Then my mother looks at it to see if it is clean or not. If it isn't she usually has to scrub the dirty spots and that sure does hurt.

"Washing my ears is a mean job and I spend a lot of my time on them because you have to get the dirt out of them cracks. When I do get the dirt out I think it well worth the time."

We're sorry Williams' letter didn't win a uprize, although he did get honorable mention. He says that if he had won a prize he was going to buy his mother a present for her birthday, August 30. So we hope William will keep on trying. Maybe his next letter will win.

Marryrose Gudice, of 420 Elm road, Ambridge, Pa., writes this card:

"I would like to wash myself with Mr. Soap and Miss Washcloth, because they are so nice to us. They clean us up so nice that they make everybody like us so much. And make us so popular."

Blue Ribbon Story

Daily Short Short-Story

By HELEN DICKSON.

Dennis Bradshaw didn't mind selling the old house. He hated the place and never spent an hour there when he could find another resting place for his golf clubs and portable typewriter, for Dennis was fate's football, a free-lance journalist. The only aspect of the sale that worried him was the disposal of the old furniture, pictures, and books, not salable, but too good to burn.

He might never have tackled the job of sorting out the old trunks and boxes if it had not been for a lingering hope that some forgotten, valuable might lurk in their depths. That hope, standing out brightly against the background of a rainy morning with two rejection slips in the mail, had sent Dennis up to the attic.

He hauled an old leather trunk into the light of a small dormer window and unfastened the straps that time had almost welded into the buckles. The odor of the nineteenth century rose to his nostrils. Gosh, what a collection to store away. A pair of faded tapestry curtains, photographs in red plush frames, a tambourine decorated with pansies painstakingly done in oils, garments lavishly covered with jet, and at the bottom of the trunk a heavy roll of foolscap, tied with faded blue ribbon.

Sitting on the dusty floor, Dennis untied the ribbon, which split with age as his fingers fumbled with the knot. It was a manuscript, written on foolscap in his mother's precise, angular hand.

"Now, who?" he asked aloud, "would have suspected mother of dabbling in the universal folly?" He cast an indulgent eye over the neatly written paragraphs. His mouth drooped open a little with surprise as he read.

He sat there, hunched like an Indian, turning page after page. He had stepped back into the gay '90s and was living and loving with people whose blood ran swiftly in spite of the cramping restraints of their voluminous clothing.

"Gosh," he muttered, "how did she do it? And why in heck did she never publish it? Gee, I'd bet . . ."

He read on, appraisingly, with a growing purpose in his mind.

"What's the use of having a publisher for an uncle," he reflected, "if I can't do something with this? The old boy thinks I'm just one of those things that happen, but this may jar him awake. Now, shall I bring it up to date or type it out as it is? The '90s are in fashion now, even in the pictures. Film rights . . . oh, boy! It isn't stealing the dear old lady would have wanted me to have it."

"Three hundred sheets of bond, two of carbon, one typewriter ribbon. Will there be anything else?"

The girl at the stationery counter looked up with eyes of such melting brown depth that Dennis Bradshaw nearly suggested a date. He just saved himself in time, remembering that he had business that evening and every evening.

Seventy thousands words. At 6,000 words a day . . . well, say 4,000 . . . that will mean 18 days to live like a Trappist monk. No dates, sister, no dates.

Actually it was a month before Dennis Bradshaw sat in his uncle's office and waited for the verdict. He was anxious purely from a financial point of view, suffering none of the qualms and sinkings of a parent whose brain child is on the scales.

The president of the Bradshaw Publishing Company tapped the manuscript on his desk with a fateful finger. "I have read this story entitled 'Tides of Life,' by Dennis Bradshaw, with great interest. It is good. They say every man has one book in him. I am willing to publish this novel on one condition," he paused weightedly. "That condition is that you publish anonymously."

Dennis jumped up. "What the . . . I say uncle, I can't agree to that. Hang it all, there are other publishers in the world . . ."

"Think again," the publisher said, smiling like a tired sage. The gaze of his cold gray eyes made his nephew feel like a naked feather in an east wind. "Are you sure you wish to take this manuscript to some other firm?"

Dennis collapsed. "How much does the old brute know or guess?" he wondered.

"It's a queer stipulation, I repeat," he said quickly. "But a poor devil of a free lance has to take what's dished out to him."

"Exactly." The publisher spoke briskly. "Just run your eye over this contract and I'll call Moffatt and Miss Sterne to witness your signature."

When they were alone again after signing the contract the publisher handed Dennis a cigar.

"Many years ago," he said musingly, "before typewriters came into common use, I employed a secretary. I had the misfortune to fall in love with her. She married my elder brother . . . your father."

"Good Lord," exclaimed Dennis, "this is all news to me."

"The manuscript of 'Tides of Life' in your mother's handwriting is . . . ah, you have guessed it . . . my one book."

"Gosh," said Dennis weakly. "I seem to have pulled a boner." He brooded for a few minutes, then suddenly brightened.

"Well, uncle, you must admit I have a nose for a good novel, even when it's tied with blue ribbon. If you ever have an opening for a reader I hope you'll remember that I'm open for a job."

Tomorrow: "Kitchen Heroine," by Paul Graves, tells how a young wife outwitted a prying mother-in-law who firmly believed no girl knew how to prepare her son's meals. The climax came when she visited the bridal pair and sniffed haughtily at the colored cook.

MAKE YOUR PLANS EARLY, FOLKS

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

The Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the directors, Wednesday evening, voted unanimous to undertake the sale of 400 tickets for the opening night at the New Plaza, which Mr. Simmons thinks will be about the first of November. This will be one of the biggest events ever held in Lamar. The show will be from a film that has never been on at any other theater—direct from Hollywood. The theater will be one of the handsomest in this part of the country. The admission will be a dollar and a half. An effort is going to be made to make it Lamar's red letter night.

BEYOND THE HILLS LIES THE HAMBURGER STAND

I beyond the hills would ride,
Tearing through hamlet and countryside
I slow down to sixty as I swerve
Over the mountains, around the curve,
I look not to left, nor glance to right,
She's hitting eighty! Supreme delight!
Beyond the trees is a crystal brook,
But I can't take time to stop and look;
The trout might go for a well cast fly,
But I won't take time to stop and try;
The open road! The smell of gas!
Hurrah for the great American ass!

The Manual of Salutes

One Broadway columnist on the Balkan winds in his August cocktails package is colophane.

He says wags that Europe has a bountiful of saluting.

The peasant is sick of waving that right arm on the air like he was stirring soup that ain't there.

The peasant is tired of that stink in the neck developed from ogling a bootlicker on a balcony.

He is also getting eye strain. Due to the fact that the dictators are getting smaller and the balconies higher.

The whole backward movement is getting snobbish from giving the right arm to queer customs, handing out nonsensical snobbish to illustrious crackpots and thumbing strange flags.

In the old days of the kings there was nothing like that. A man served his two years in the army. That was that. He had done his duty to king and country.

Now, there ain't no despotic monarchs and a man is in the army all the time.

If he doesn't guess right on the correct uniforms for the day he's a bound gander. They stand him up against a wall and turn him into a dead statue.

Listen to a little marital conversation in Central Europe. "Dearie I think you should wear your white shirt tonight." "Good heavens, honey! Do you want me to be shot?"

That's true. Your life depends on the color of your linen. If a deep brown shirt fades to a pale tan, you are a traitor to the cause.

A Broken Promise

The Democratic Pledge to Take the Government Out of Business Is Violated.

The Democratic pledge, in its 1932 platform, to take the government out of business, seems to have been "fulfilled," and with a vengeance, by doing the reverse.

It brings to mind the famous chapter of Dickens, in which he describes the whole science of government as the art of "how not to do it."

"It is true," wrote Dickens, "that every new government, coming in because they had upheld a certain thing as necessary to be done, were no sooner come in than they applied their utmost faculties to discovering how not to do it.

"From the moment a general election was over, every returned man who had been raving (on the stump) because it hadn't been done, and who had been asking the friends of the honorable gentleman in the opposite interest on pain of impeachment to tell him why it hadn't been done, and who had been asserting that it must be done, and who had been pledging himself that it should be done, began to devise, how it was not to be done."

Where could words more apt be found to describe this betrayal by the Democratic party of itself—this apostasy to its doctrines and its promises?

The government today is not only in business up to the hilt, but immersed, submerged, and sunk with all hands—in business!

In a striking article by Arthur Krock, in the New York Times, the extent to which our government has thrust itself into the entire field of the people's business is revealed in a way that all may appreciate.

He tells the story of two men who wrote letters to Washington, one addressed to the Commodity Credit Corporation, seeking a loan of $5,000, and the other asking the Civilian Conservation Corps to give him a job.

"One week later," writes Mr. Krock, "the man who sought the loan found himself chopping wood in the forest, and the intended woodchoper was staring at a $5,000 check from Washington in his mail."

This reliable correspondent gives other illustrations of the GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS.

One day a man went to NRA headquarters and said, "I make diapers. Where do I go?"

They sent him to cotton goods, but cotton goods after much study sent him to cotton textiles on the ground that this was a manufactured article.

But cotton textiles could not deal with him because its authority extended to adults only, so he went to the children's divisions where new perplexities arose.

Did his application belong to children's underwear or over-wear clothes, it being observed, as is commonly known, that a baby may have a diaper for his only garment.

The man finally reached children's underwear, as related by Mr. Krock, and here it was decided, after much conferring, that there was a lack of the necessary authority.

Finally the applicant was referred to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the chief federal administrator of the National Recovery Administration! Here at last he obtained the long sought and formal action of the national government of the United States!

Gen. Johnson gave him a diaper code of his own.

The Canal Opposition

The French Creek Project Is Hardly a Formidable Rival of the Beaver-Mahoning Plan

It is encouraging to learn that organized opposition to the Beaver-Mahoning canal route from the Ohio River to Lake Erie, recommended by the Board of Army Engineers, is expected only from advocates of the French Creek route. Promoters of the Miami-Toledo and Scioto-Sandusky routes are contenting themselves with perfunctory pleas. A hearing for all will be held September 17.

We cannot regard the French Creek route as a formidable rival to the Beaver-Mahoning project favored by Pittsburgh businessmen. The French Creek plan might be less expensive, but it could not furnish nearly as much traffic as would come from the highly industrialized Beaver Falls and Youngstown districts. And it would be unreasonable to expect Youngstown and Beaver Falls shippers to send freight all the way up the Ohio and Allegheny to French Creek, to reach the Great Lakes.

Our friends up the Allegheny River deserve a lot of credit for the good fight that they are making for their route. But if the final decision is against them, as we hope and believe it will be, we shall expect them not to withhold their congratulations.

The French Creek canal may come later.

New Air Service

The Time-Saving Possible on Business Trips Will Encourage Many to Fly

A new aviation schedule went into effect today which makes it possible to leave Pittsburgh at 10:30 a. m., arrive at Washington before noon, spend more than five hours there, and be back home in time for a late dinner.

There are still some conservative men and women who hesitate to fly. But with the safety and reliability of flying proved by long periods of regular service without accident, we do not believe they will be able much longer to resist such opportunities for time-saving on business trips as are offered, for instance, by the new Washington service.

Taxation Must Be Just

The Approaching County Fair Calls Attention to an Important Principle

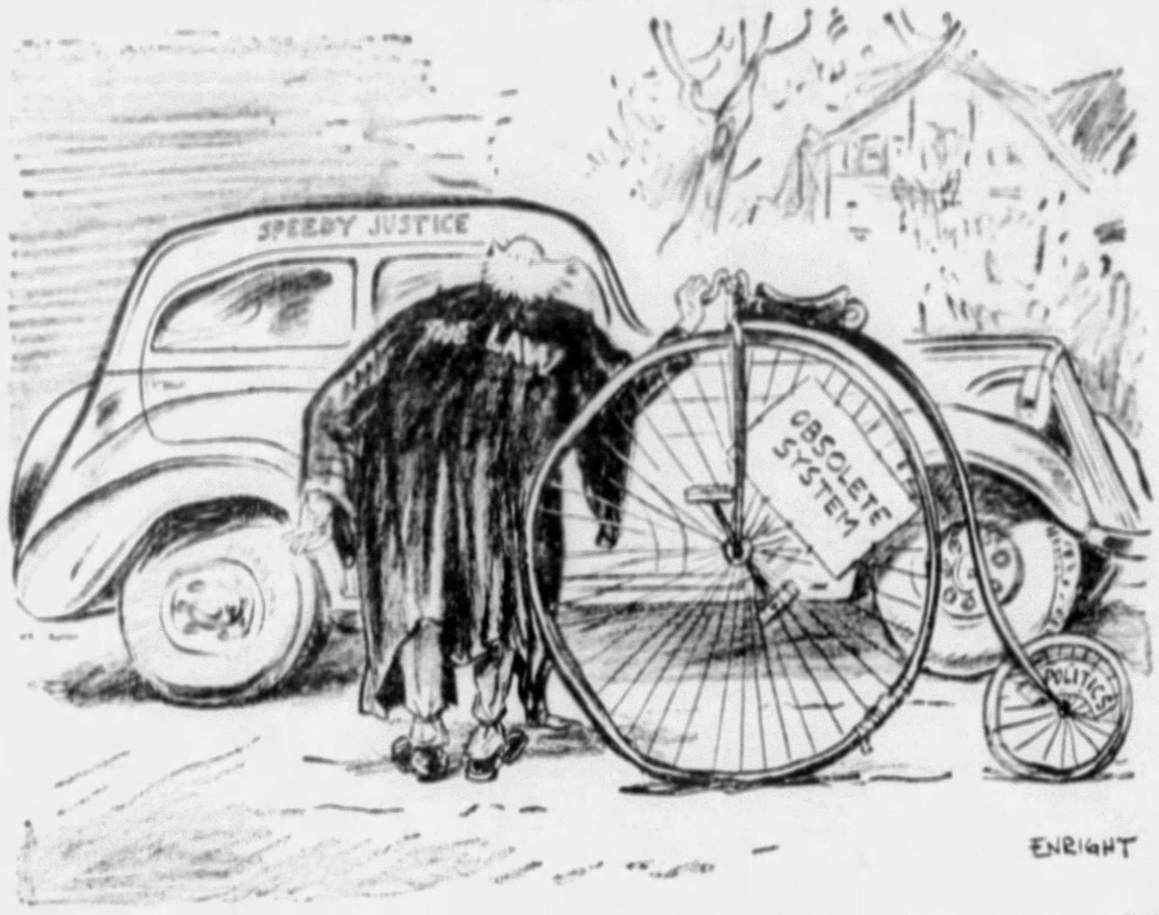
Citizens will note with appreciation "a bit of Allegheny County history" written by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern as a foreword to the premium list and program of the county's second annual fair, which will be held at South Park next week.

Col. McGovern reminds us that the Whisky Insurrection of 1794 broke out on the site now occupied by the park, when a United States Marshal, accompanied by Gen. Daniel Neville, attempted to serve a warrant on Oliver Miller at his home where the Stone Manse now stands.

The Colonel then goes on to say that "the Whisky Rebellion and the ideas of government worked out in part under primitive conditions on the historic ground which is now Allegheny County's South Park went a great way toward establishing the principle that taxation, necessary as it then was and still is, nevertheless must be just and reasonable."

It is particularly appropriate that that principle should be recalled at the present time, when excessive taxation is retarding business and preventing national recovery.

Finally Taking Notice



For years there has been public protest—vehement protest—against delays and abuses of civil and criminal justice in this country.

Whole volumes of protest have been written and published, and hardly anything was accomplished until lately.

Why?

Because FAILURES of justice are only SYMPTOMS, and a disease cannot be cured by treating symptoms.

Behind the FAILURES were their CAUSES—technical defects in the whole system, which laymen could not easily comprehend and which lawyers, generally speaking, did not want to remedy because these very defects MADE PROFITABLE BUSINESS FOR LAWYERS.

A judiciary and public prosecutors chosen by politics instead of always for fitness, low standards of admittance to the bar, lax machinery for maintaining legal ethics, too much control of the courts by lawyer legislators, absurd civil and criminal codes, and finally court rules of practice (called procedural law) that favor shyster tactics—these are and have been the main causes of our failures of justice.

And the Hearst newspapers, in their American Justice Campaign, have insisted that these defects must be corrected.

A start has been made—in New York State, in the Federal Courts, and so on.

The work must continue, vigorously!

England two generations ago instituted far-reaching legal and judicial reforms by passing the celebrated Judicature Act—a law FRAMED BY LAYMEN when judges and lawyers failed to act.

And in this country, it is up to THE LAWYERS and THE JUDGES to make reform COMPLETE and PROMPT.

For otherwise, laymen—here as in England—will have to take over the job.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

She Can 'Turn Her Hand to Anything' . . . But What Does It Get Her?

I doubt if there's a more tragic spectacle than the housewife over 35 who is suddenly forced to seek a job, with no preparation except her domestic record for "turning her hand to anything."

The cards, of course, were stacked against her from the start. She was born before the turning of the century, before women had jobs or careers, when the "old-fashioned girl" and the "womanly woman" were still the ideal . . . in a slow, cautious world of pretty, petty, precise programs where swift, independent, reckless people were distrusted and despised.

Her personal life was removed as far as possible from rude realities. She spent vast amounts of time in aimless fluttering over trivial and unnecessary chores. Gilding pine cones, Covering her furniture—and her thoughts—with scraps of embroidery. Her waist—and her imagination—were both boned and beruffled. Her house—and her mind—were filled with silly, sentimental gim-cracks and knick-knacks.

She usually was—let us hasten to add—a generous person. She made some man very happy. Her children adored her. Her neighbors boasted about her . . . handing around her recipe for angel cake, copying her clever new way of hanging the "sitting-room" drapes. She was a power in her little world.

Suddenly, almost over night, that world and its standards were swept away. Every rule by which she had lived was either obliterated or reversed. She had learned to do little things perfectly, with slow caution. But here was a world which had no use for "fancy work," mental or material, no patience with puttering perfection . . . a world which took its tempo from its racing machinery, in which a man had to compete with automobiles, aeroplanes, typewriters, radios, dictaphones.

Now she comes into my office looking for work. Harry hasn't had a job for two years. She wants to help out, so Junior can keep on with school.

What—I ask—can she do? Airily, with pretty pride, she assures me she "can do most anything"—and proceeds to tell what a riot she was with the Ladies' Aid when they had to raise the church mortgage.

There's a lump in my throat. She doesn't see it. I hate myself, but I have to go on. That—I say—was fine. But of course it's a little different with a business job. What, exactly, could she do in an office?

She hesitates, a little impatient at my stupidity. Why, she repeats, she's already told me what she can do. She can turn to anything! Type? No, she can't do that. But she's sure she could learn. And everyone says what a lovely hand she writes.

Bookkeeping, filing, practical nursing, millinery, fitting? No, she hasn't learned those things, either.

By this time there are nervous red blotches on her plump, white neck. She's plainly exasperated. What a mean person I am to discourage her like this, instead of seeing how wonderful she is to want to help Harry! Even if she doesn't know how to do those tiresome things, all she needs is just a Little Time.

I turn my head. I don't want to see the inevitable dawning of fear in those child-like eyes. Patiently I try to explain that the world can't give anyone "just a little time" to learn . . . that it can't coddle amateurs, no matter how noble their motives or pitiful their need.

But she isn't listening. She won't believe. I'm just being mean and selfish . . . one of those cold, heartless people who refuse to give anyone a chance.

She flounces out.

And I sit there, growing angry and heartsick myself at the needless tragedy of it all.

Why do we let women grow up like that—as unprepared to face life as babies in a jungle? Why aren't they warned of the cruel pressure ahead . . . trained, at least, to think currently . . . urged to arm themselves with something better than bridge rules or fancy work in their leisure hours?

BRITISH RESPECT LAW

By Winifred Black

He shot a policeman the other day—the burglar who was trying to escape. Not a serious wound, mind you; just a little surface affair in the flesh of the arm.

But he shot a policeman, and that policeman was not an American cop; he was an English bobby. And that seems to make an amazing amount of difference.

The whole of England read the news over the morning cup of tea, and every man in England who could read gasped with horror.

What! Shot a bobby? Who ever heard of such a thing?

No, it wasn't Jim O'Shaughnessy, or Pat Maloney, or whatever his name might be, that mattered so much. The man who did that shooting shot England close to the heart—and all England rose in pursuit of the outrageous criminal.

Scotland Yard was up in arms. The village constabulary rose and every man jack in the ripe little tight little island who had a horse to ride or a car to pilot was off in hot pursuit.

What! Attack an officer of the law and get away with it? Not if England knew it.

And England did know it. And in a very few hours the man who shot the bobby was trapped. Then there was just one thing left for him to do, and he did it.

He killed himself, and "jolly well out of it," as they say on the Strand.

A man who merely raises his open hand and resists an officer of the law in England has his trouble cut out for him before he's a minute older. But to assault a bobby with a deadly weapon? It isn't done! It really isn't, don't you know?

How different it is here in our own dear United States.

"Jigger, he shot the cop; let's help him make his getaway."

That's the sentiment; let's hot try to deny it.

Where did he get the gun? Who sold it to him? How did he dare to carry it? Pouf! Don't talk nonsense.

Be yourself! What do you think we are—a lot of kids, to look up to a man just because he's wearing a certain kind of uniform?

I'll say not!

Of course, he's something besides Mike Maloney. He really does represent the law, and the law represents the might and dignity of the whole people.

We had to crawl a long ways up out of the jungles to create that law and the uniform that represents it. But—pish, tosh—who cares for that, when the comfort or safety of Jip the Blood, or Jim the Penman is at stake?

"With a tow row row de row row, the British grenadier," and all that sort of thing. Well, that may go down in dear old England, don't you know—but not here; not on your life!

Thieves, toughs, gangsters, murderers. Why, they're not such a bad lot after all—not as we Americans seem to look at them.

Of course, we have nearly 10 times as many murderers in proportion to the population as they have in slow old England.

I wonder if this "resisting an officer" fad has anything in the world to do with that.

What do you think about it?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Love and Learn

It is always astounding to a man to discover that a woman's "slavish adoration" can be the most intensive form of tyranny.

The safest state of mind in which to keep a lover, or even an average husband, is that indefinite one, in which he feels that he's always welcome and desirable, but never indispensible.

When a woman goes on too long trying to play the siren she has to choose between running a kindergarten and running a free lunch for the financially broke.

Most men and women could get more joy out of the Indian Summer of life if they would not mistake it for the return of spring. The roses and rapture of youth are sweet—but they don't come back with the grapes and goldenrod.

* * *

The average man syndicates his affections and his kisses—probably because he thinks it's a shame to waste so much "It" on one girl at a time.

"Marriage" is becoming such a broad term that it covers almost as many things as "heart failure," or "mental cruelty." So long as two people postcard each other now and then, they are "happily married," whether they live in the same house or in different countries.

* * *

Those frank, militant tactics of man-capture are losing their novelty and effectiveness. Men have become so wise to the high-pressure salesmanship of the go-getting female, that marrying-girls have to go back to grandmother's subtle tricks—vapors, fainting spells and all!

The modern father seems to forget that HE probably looked just as much like a practical joke to his wife's parents as does the nameless wonder whom daughter drags in and announces is the light of her life.

A man's tastes in women change with the years, like his tastes in pastimes. What's sauce for the gay young gosling may be ptomaine poisoning for the gander.

Will Rogers Says:

Will Rogers

HSINKING, Manchukuo, Aug. 22.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

No more monkeyshines in Austria. The Austrian chancellor has been visiting Mussolini and learning a lot. This fellow Benito is running a free school for dictators. They all come to him to learn how to put it over. You don't have to worry about dictators in America until Rex Tugwell passes his entrance exams at Mussolini's academy.

Yours, WILL.

Rhyming Optimist

Songs Unsung

So many songs are still to sing
That it is hard to choose
Which melody to voice; a king
Some jewels must refuse.

Turquoise and opal, ruby, jade,
All lie within my reach,
Till sometimes I just pause, afraid;
Thoughts throng too fast for speech.

No king am I, but one who knows
Songs ever-sweet delight,
Though I may leave the ruby's rose
For moonstone's elfin light.

So many songs are still unsung,
Such melodies unheard,
Rare thoughts that wait the minstrel's tongue,
The poet's blazing word!

Text for Today Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path, because of mine enemies.—Psalms, xxvii:11.

Human Side of the News

Winston Churchill, British Statesman, Declares Another War Would Be Suicidal for Civilization

By Edwin C. Hill

AT THIS distance from Whitehall, British statesmanship appears to be more or less in the doldrums. With the Liberal party merely a ghost of its once lusty self, with the Labor party split into two or three irreconcilable factions and a furious quarrel flaming between the one-time dear friends and political partners, Ramsay MacDonald and Philip Snowden, the Tories, the Conservatives, are again in actual power, with Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, as the real head of government.

And on the sidelines, a kind of British Bill Borah, the most remarkable personage of them all, barks at all and sundry and bides his time. I mean Winston Churchill, of the Marlborough line, half American through his mother, the one-time New York belle, Jennie Jerome.

This distinguished Englishman whose blue eyes regard one with an expression half quizzical, half challenging, has held, I believe, every worth-while post in the British government except that of Prime Minister. It is the exultant hope of his friends, who are legion, and the apprehension of his political foes, who are by no means few, that he will wrest this great honor eventually from the fingers of Destiny.

No British subject that I know of has surged through a career of such energy, color, dash and high adventure. As a young man he rode with the British cavalry in the border warfares of India. He was in the front lines of the Spanish Army in Cuba—but that was before, not after, the United States had taken up the Cuban cause. He was captured in the Boer War and made a spectacular and daring escape from a Boer prison camp.

Sent British Fleet To Scapa Flow

THESE and numerous other exploits and adventures furnished material for a literary style which has no superior in the British Isles. When the Great War came on he was First Lord of the Admiralty, and it was his decisive stroke which sent the British fleet to its battle station at Scapa Flow to take the first—and last—firm grip on the Channel and the North Sea.

Giving up the admiralty post, he commanded a regiment of Scotch Fusiliers in France. As a government minister he has held eight posts, and his latest job of statesmanship was as Chancellor of the Exchequer, when he kept the British credit up to the notch. He is so celebrated for his slashing independence and tart originality that they call him "The Bad Boy of British Politics." But they say this—that next to the Prince of Wales and His Majesty, the King, he is probably the best-liked man under the Union Jack.

He is an orator who fills the benches and the galleries of the House of Commons. As an author, he is the most glamorous of English writers today. He has written biography, essays, fiction, history. He is a polo player, does not take golf too seriously, and is probably the best mah-jongg player west of Suez. He is a bricklayer, a landscape painter, and a collector of old hats.

His old friend, the late Earl of Birkenhead, said this of him—and it expresses a volume:

"Mr. Churchill's tastes are simple. He is easily contented with the best of everything."

Few can touch him for the vitality of his marching phrases. A man of action with the gift of translating the dramatic and making it live. But he has even more than that. He has the power of looking upon mankind as a whole, and of seeing, however dimly, the dangerous road it is traveling. He asks the blunt question: "Shall we all commit suicide?" And points to the fact, known in the secret archives of every great nation, that the great war ended at the very moment when Science had delivered into men's hands methods of exterminating whole communities, wrecking whole cities.

War Will Destroy Whole Populations

MAN has finally got into his hands the tools by which he can unfailingly accomplish his own extermination. That is the point in human destiny to which all the glories and toil of men have led them. Death stands at attention, obedient, expectant, ready if called upon, to pulverize, without hope of repair, what is left of civilization. Death waits only the word of command. He awaits it from a frail, bewildered being, long his victim—now, for one occasion, his master.

Russia, brooding over her lost Baltic provinces, bides her time. From one end of Germany to the other an intense hatred of France unites the whole population. German youth, growing to manhood, are inspired by the fiercest sentiments, and the soul of Germany smoulders with dreams of a war of liberation or revenge. Disarmed now, Germany is a far stronger entity than France, and cannot be kept in permanent subjugation.

Only the exhaustion of Europe—of the world—stays war today, and when exhaustion passes, as it must, war will flame forth again, in Winston Churchill's opinion, for the story of the human race is war. It must flame forth again unless the world heeds the signs, and mankind pauses on the brink of his own suicide.

For if war comes again, it will destroy whole populations, with agencies of destruction wholesale, unlimited and perhaps uncontrollable. And of all thoughts Mr. Churchill offers in this remarkable book, "Amid These Storms," the most arresting is his conclusion that today mankind has the strength of civilization without its mercy. His science has run beyond his wisdom. It has run beyond his very nature. Under sufficient stress—starvation, terror, war-like passion, or cold, intellectual frenzy—the modern man we know so well, will do the most terrible deeds, and his modern woman will back him up.

'One House' Legislature, Nebraska Plan

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ONE OF the advantages of the American system of government is the opportunity it affords for each state in the Union to become a political experimental station. This enables one state to share with the other 47 states the lessons learned by such experimentation.

Of interest to her sister states is an experiment in government that will come before the people of Nebraska for approval at the November elections. They will vote upon a proposed amendment to their state constitution which, if adopted, would establish a State Legislature of one chamber, limit membership to between 30 and 50 members, nominated and elected on non-partisan tickets. They would be paid not a nominal but a substantial salary—one large enough to attract men of character and competency to offer themselves for legislative service.

Although he is not the author of this legislative proposal, Senator Norris, the father of the "lame duck" amendment to the Federal Constitution which abolished the short session of Congress, has enthusiastically indorsed it. He is credited with obtaining most of the 100,000 signatures to the petition which put this amendment on the ballot.

A State Legislature consisting of one chamber and not more than 50 members would reduce the cost of government to the people of Nebraska. It would give them a working body, chosen primarily for their personal qualifications and without regard to their political affiliation. If the experiment succeeded in Nebraska it would doubtless be adopted by other states.

Wish to Reduce Cost of Government

THE FACT that the people of Nebraska have, on their own initiative, placed such a proposal on the ballot offers another encouraging sign of the stiffening determination of the people all over the country to reduce the cost and raise the standard of state and local government by reducing the number of politicians on the payroll.

Although county government has been described as "the dark continent of American politics" and local government in many states might with equal truth be called "the dismal swamp" of American politics, there is lots of room for improvement in the organization of state governments.

In state after state today public money is being squandered on the upkeep of two or three times the number of executive departments that are necessary to the efficient conduct of the public business.

And the more than 3,000 county governments which the people throughout the Union are taxed to support could with advantage be reduced to 300. County government in metropolitan areas is a useless expense to the people. It is kept alive by pork barrel politicians who fill its useless offices with their political heelers. County government outside metropolitan areas can be modernized by consolidation and by the transfer to the state of many functions now delegated to county government.

To bring about these reforms in the obsolete system of county and local government that has come down from the days of the oxcart, constitutional amendments are necessary in most of the states. Even where the modernizing of county government is within the power of the Legislature, the county political rings have such a grip on the government of the state that it is hard to get county reorganization measures through both houses of a State Legislature.

Public Sentiment Is Forcing Action

IN SPITE of these obstacles, public sentiment seems to be forcing governors and legislatures in an increasing number of states to consider ways and means of reducing the cost and raising the standard of state government and of modernizing the system of county and local government.

There seems to be a growing realization of the fact that these reforms must be resorted to if the people are to be given what with increasing determination they are demanding north, east, south and west:

Fewer politicians to feed at the public trough and more and better public schools, served by better trained and better paid teachers to train the citizens of tomorrow.

If the people of Nebraska vote next November to consolidate their Legislature into a single body, the people of other states will be encouraged to carry that consolidating process into the field of county and local government.

In this way, "old economies will supplant new taxes" and government of the people, by the people, for the people will not overthrow government of the people, by the politicians, for the politicians.
